BANK WRECKERS.

The wreck of the Globe National bank of Boston and the peculiar financial dealings it has exposed may furnish a valuable lesson for the men whose duty it is to safeguard the banking operations of the nation. It came to light two months ago that former President Cole of the Boston bank had issued the bank's credit and money to bolster up investments in inflated stocks. At that time it might have been possible to avert the disaster which has overtaken the Globe National, and its effect on the financial world, even had publicity caused a crash in that one institution, would have caused hardly a ripple.

It is alleged that Banker Cole used $900,000 of other people's money to speculate with on the Boston stock exchange. If his financial schemes had turned out all right the people who furnished the money would not have benefited a dollar beyond the small interest allowed on their deposits. If he lost, and it seems that he did, innocent and industrious people pay the piper. The result of this reckless speculation will fall heavily on the small savings banks of Massachusetts in the first place, but indirectly will effect every town whose bank will be called upon to make good its portion of the deficit. But the imprudent speculation of Banker Cole has proven of more evil. The bank failed when the great stock exchanges of the East were on the verge of a panic. To bolster up public confidence it was necessary that every financial institution show itself to be solid as a rock, and the wrecking of an institution in which the deposits amounted, according to the last statement, to considerably over $8,000,000, with widespread connections, has depleted the already low reserves of New York and New England banks at a time when it is most difficult to borrow money for legitimate business dealings.

There are still glaring flaws in the laws which govern banking, perhaps the most dangerous that permits the directing officials to embark in doubtful speculation with the money of depositors. Overdrafts on personal account should not be tolerated in a single instance, while an effectual bar should be raised against loaning or using money with no more security than that afforded by the rise and fall of gambling stock exchanges. It is not intended that legitimate banks invade the stock exchanges, and no banker who attempts to make his institution pay dividends by such speculation will enjoy the confidence of depositors. That pasture should be confined to men who risk only their own private fortunes. There is such a wide field for loaning money on gilt edge securities that deposits may be placed with absolutely no risk to the man who trusts his little all to the great financial institutions.--Spokesman-Review.

Some people who are busier with the great affairs of nations than their quality of brains warrants are again urging arbitration by President McKinley between England and the Transvaal republic. But as neither party has called upon the president to act as arbitrator, it would be an act of officious impertinence for him to offer his services. He certainly has business enough of his own to attend to.

A SURE CURE FOR CROUP.

Twenty-five Years' Constant Use Without a Failure.

The first indication of croup is hoarseness, and in a child subject to this disease it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is used in many thousands of homes in this broad land and never disappoints the anxious mothers. We have yet to learn of a single instance in which it has not proved effectual. No other preparation can show such a record--twenty-five years' constant use without a failure. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton.
