JEFFERSON WAS FOR FORCE.

It may be said the acquisition of the Philippines would endanger our foreign relations. But we hold them now with the good will of all the great powers, and that was not the case with Louisiana. In a special message of December 6, 1895, President Jefferson, in communicating to congress the ugly attitude of Spain over the cession of Louisiana by France, said:

"From that moment she seemed to change her conduct and dispositions toward us. It was first manifested by her protest against the right of France to alienate Louisiana to us, which, however, was soon retracted, and the right confirmed."

Spain then disputed the boundaries of a large part of Louisiana, and Jefferson "sent James Monroe to Madrid as minister extraordinary and plenipotentiary, in conjunction with our minister resident there, to endeavor to procure a ratification of the former convention, and to come to an understanding with Spain as to the boundaries of Louisiana."

Nothing was accomplished by that embassy. Jefferson tells us they were not able to obtain any "satisfaction as to the boundaries of Louisiana, other than a declaration that we had no rights east of the Iberville, and that our line to the west was one which would have left us but a string of land on that bank of the river Mississippi."

In this special message Jefferson urged congress to make a show of war against Spain. "The present crisis in Europe," said the president, "is favorable for pressing such a settlement, and not a moment should be lost in availing ourselves of it. Formal war is not necessary—it is not probable it will follow—but the protection of our citizens, the spirit and honor of our country, require that force should be interposed to a certain degree."

A clear threat of conquest, if you please, nothing but conquest.

Acquisition of the Philippines may be opposed, with some show of logic, on grounds of national expediency; but on grounds of precedent or principle, assuredly not.—Spokesman-Review.

MRS. DEWEY'S CARDS.

The wife of Admiral Dewey has raised another social tempest in Washington by announcing that she will not be able to return calls except by cards, says the Chicago Record's correspondent.

Before her marriage Mrs. Dewey's visiting list was comparatively short, but when she became the wife of the hero of Manila and the admiral of the navy she was naturally the object of particular interest, and there was a long string of carriages in front of her house every afternoon, bearing people who expected she would reciprocate their attentions. Now, when they are informed that she does not intend to take the trouble to visit them in person, but merely to send a card by the hands of her footman or through the postoffice, they are inclined to say saucy things.

Napoleon said of the English, that they did not know when they were beaten. Most certainly their reputation is not that of men who lose their nerve when they get licked. The reverses in South Africa has only knit all parties in England closer together, and we predict that the only result of the Boer successes in South Africa will be to make the British realize the full size of the task they have undertaken, and to go ahead and finish it.—Leader.

SAND FOR DYSPEPSIA.

A Chicago Man Eats a Half Teaspoonful Every Day and Finds Himself Cured.

"Eat half a teaspoonful of sand a day and you'll be healthy," says Louis Connors, a Chicago baker, according to the Chicago Tribune.

Connors takes his own medicine and swallows a mouthful of sand in a glass of water every 24 hours. He declares that he thrives on the peculiar diet, and that all of his family are sand eaters, more or less.

"No, I don't buy it at the drug stores, and I don't use any of that," says Connors; "I just dip a couple of sand and six and eight all mixed up out on the lake front. Then I wash the dirt out of it, and eat the sand. I think it probably would do just as well to eat dirt and all, but I'm a little particular about my diet."

Connors' theory is that every human being, like some lower animals, needs a certain amount of sand in the stomach to aid digestion.

A REAL "SHE" IN AFRICA.

Legendary Queen of the Majaji, Dead Many Years, But Still Reigning.

Everybody has read Rider Haggard's famous novel "She." The main figure of the story certainly lived and died in the Transvaal, according to an English writer, and not so many years ago either. "She" was really Majaji. Only a few years ago there was a native disturbance up north, beyond the Zoutpansberg range of mountains, in what was known as Majaji's country. Commandant Haggard Pretorius, an old Boer and a descendant of President Pretorius, after whom Pretoria was called, went up to quell the uprising. The natives have a legendary queen, Majaji, who has really been dead for years, but they pretend, and justifiably, because themselves, that she is still alive, and dwelling in a cave in the mountains, whence she reigns over them, and leaves her wishes through the medium of magic men.

Pretorius demanded to see this queen. The founder (chief) of the natives replied: "Show us your government and we will show you Majaji."

The natives speak of her with awe, and refer to "the wishes of She-in-a-cave."

TRICKS OF CHOIR SINGERS.

How They Carry on Conversation While Pretending to Sing the Service.

One of the English bishops has been complaining that he notices about many choir boys and men a want of reverence and of attention to the services that are going on, and he exemplifies this by saying that the choristers talk in song and have a sort of "voluntary" of their own wherein they drop the original words and, to sacred music, chant: "I am so hungry; I hope we shall finish soon."

But this, in reality, is a very old complaint, and the average stage manager is far more afflicted by it than even are choirmasters connected with places of worship. The rows of chorus men and girls one sees on the stage carry on long and animated conversations about everything under the sun, and all to music. And all the time they indulge in the gestures they have been taught as appropriate to the scene, their thoughts are really with the themes of their musical chat, and thus it is that these gestures seem so wooden and artificial. And it is a fact that the great bulk of the chorus people engaged in the highest class "Italian" opera sing any gibberish they please.
