A Good Show.

Another pleased audience witnessed the performance of "Human Hearts" at Cordray's theater last evening. The play is one of worth, and is proving more attractive and popular during the present visit than during the previous engagement. The cast is good and care and attention are paid to every line. There are many thrilling situations, and the touching scenes are handled in a most delicate manner. The play is not all pathos, by any means, for it is full of laughter and comedy, the two alternating with rapidity. As a melodrama "Human Hearts" is highly satisfactory.

and is aptly termed by an old theater-goer, "a good show," which is sufficiently expressive.—Telegram.
