BRITISH TRADE MOVEMENT.

Nowhere in the world have the contests between employers and employees been more bitter, more prolonged or more disastrous to all concerned than in Great Britain. It has, therefore, been inevitable that that country should be prolific in expedients for preventing such troubles. Of late a movement, originated by E. J. Smith, a manufacturer of Birmingham, has been making such progress and attracting such attention on the continent as to deserve a brief description.

A writer in the San Francisco Chronicle sums up the essence of the plan as co-operation between employers and employees within a trade, with the right of examination of books and accounts when necessary. As between manufacturers there is an agreement not to sell without making a certain profit, agreed upon in advance, and uniform for all. With that restriction he may fix his own selling price, so that any one who is able to produce more cheaply than others is at liberty to undersell, but he must be prepared at all times to prove from his books, by an agreed method of reckoning, that he is actually making the agreed profit.

As between employers and workmen, the wages and hours of work actually customary in the trade at the time of organization are taken as the standard. As it frequently happens that the trade is organized at a time when the masters are on the verge of bankruptcy and the workmen on the verge of starvation, wages are invariably low and profits nothing. The object of the alliance is the raising of prices to a profitable point, and its rules provide that every advance made shall be divided, in a manner mutually agreed in advance as equitable, between masters and workmen. The result of this is that the prosperity of both masters and workmen is directly connected with the maintenance of the alliance, with the consequence of the creation of a strong public opinion permeating the whole body of the trade in favor of a fair execution of its provisions. As we understand it, both employers and employees become members of the alliance by individual signature, binding workmen to serve only members, and masters to employ only members, membership being free and open to all connected with the trade. Arrangements are made for joint boards or committees for the settlement of all questions which can arise, and funds for expenses are provided by a uniform tax. It is obligatory that workmen shall be members of a union, and their consent is essential to any advance in price, and, of course, to any reduction.

The above is but a bare outline of the most essential features of the alliances, which are quite fully described in a late consular report. The movement began some seven years since in the bedstead trade, to which Mr. Smith belongs. It has proved entirely satisfactory to both workmen and employers and bids fair to be taken up by many other trades, both in England and on the continent, where it is attracting much attention.

The Dalles Republicans did not send club representatives to the league convention at Portland, which met this week. The principal reason was that the state meeting usually results in factions fighting for offices, instead of a Republican love feast that would prepare the party for its battles after the conventions are over. The doings at Portland Tuesday showed that the decision of our local Republicans was wise. The whole thing was merged into a "scrap" for factional benefit. The Telegram abetted the fight in its report by bringing in names of prominent politicians, one a United States senator. It is shameful. "Representative Republicanism" is the principle that will bring peace into the party's councils.

WINTER TRIPS.

For winter residence or winter outing ideal conditions will be found on every hand in California. Penteous early rainfall has this season given to the semi-tropical vegetation wonderful impetus; the floral offerings are more than usually generous and the crop of southern fruits bountiful and excellent.

Old ocean possesses new charms at Santa Barbara, Santa Monica, Long Beach, Coronado and the enchanted isle of the sea, Catalina—where fishing, boating, rambling, riding, hunting and loafing may be enjoyed as nowhere else. Quiet little spots, snug and warm, offer themselves at Montecito, Nordhoff, Pasadena, Echo Mountain, San Jacinto, Fall Brook and Palm Springs.

For renewing health and vigor, here abound many hot springs, of widely varying constituents and demonstrated merits; the dry, antiseptic, tonic air of the desert may be enjoyed at Banning, Indio, Yuma; and, even farther on, at Phoenix, Tucson, El Paso, exists conditions equally well indicated for weak throats and lungs.

Many think nothing in nature more attractive than the shimmering olive orchards of Santa Barbara and San Diego; others prefer the stately walnuts of Ventura and Los Nietos, or the lemons of Fernando; but for glorious fruit and graceful tree commend us to the golden orange, first, last and always, and it exists in greatest perfection at Covina, Riverside, Redlands and Highlands. Equally interesting is the scientific and tempting fashion in which the sorting and packing of the orange is here accomplished.

The faithful were exhorted to see Mecca and shuffle off; but wiser generations will see California of the south and prolong life.
