"THE LITTLE MINISTER"

Presented By a Splendid Company in a Most Pleasing Manner.

If those who read Barrie's "Little Minister" deemed it an odd story as told in the novel, their opinion was only intensified as they witnessed the play at the Vogt last night; for while varying greatly from the book, it has lost none of its oddness, which was, if anything, intensified by the fact that much of the conversation was lost on the audience on account of the acoustic properties of the hall. However, in the hands of such a splendid company as Frohmann's, the production was greatly enjoyed, and kept all wondering what would come next.

Grace Heyer was "Babbie" outright, and seemed to have a perfect understanding of the difficult part, for difficult it certainly is. In the first place she has such a charming appearance, added to which the enteness of her acting and the absence of affectation made her perfect. Kate Ten Eyck, as "Nannie Webster" was equally as good and did the old maid's part in a manner greatly pleasing to all. It may, however, be said that in the second act she somewhat exaggerated the character, but not to its detriment.

What is said of the former ladies will also apply to Sadie Lauer as "Mieau Dow" and Marion Corvère, Bibbia's maid, for though the latter had less prominent characters were fully as ex-acting.

Adolph Jackson evidently has a conception of the character of the little minister which is hardly understood by his audience. The Oregonian spoke of him as appearing "dazed." And such is the impression given; more of one who is under the hypnotic influence of the "little witch" as he terms her. As such he could not have done better; and no doubt his is the correct interpretation, for looking at it in another light he lacks enthusiasm and it would seem was wanting in the Scotch heartiness.

One of the most taking things in the play was the part which the four elders carried out so perfectly. Their facial expressions, poses and make-up were faultless and it is not an unusual thing to meet their counterpart in every day life. They afforded much amusement.

"Bob Daw" as the faithful friend of his minister and one who would give his life for him was a veritable Scotchman in the whole-souled character he represented.

It has been some time since such an all-around good company has visited The Dalles and our people are very grateful to Mr. Clarke for the pleasure afforded them. The Dalles would soon gain a reputation as a theater-going community were we to have many such plays.

SMALL-POX IN TOWN.

Victim Came From Across the River—A Charge on the City.

A man by the name of McDonald, who has been working for the Central Construction and Navigation Co., came in town this morning and went into one of our public buildings in quest of a doctor. He happened to meet one in the hallway and was asked what seemed to be the matter with him. Replying that he did not know, he took off his hat and the doctor immediately recognized that the man had small-pox. McDonald was advised to take a walk to the corner of Third and Washington streets until the authorities could be notified. A couple of councilmen happened to be passing and they in conjunction with the City marshal decided to take the man immediately to the pest house which is located far back in the pines.

It was rather amusing to see Marshal Hughes on one side of the street and the afflicted man on the other wending their way to the place of isolation.

McDonald is not very bad at present but a nurse will have to be secured to take care of him within a few days. It seems rather nervy of the fellow to march in on the population in the manner he did as he may be the means of spreading the disease. The city officials think also that they are getting the worst of it but they agree where succor is needed it must be given.

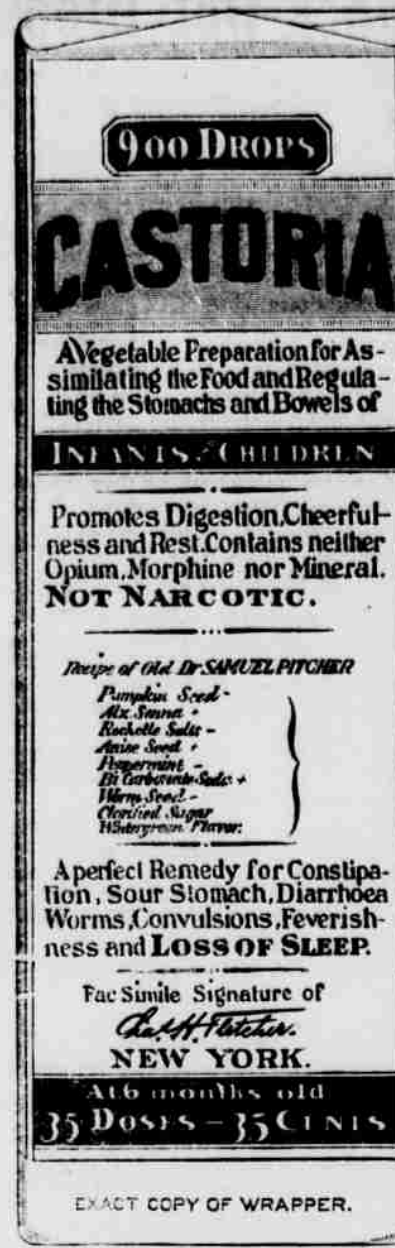

McDonald stated that more cases would likely break out in the same camp he came from, which is located only a few miles up the river on the Washington side. It would probably be well for those in authority to investigate and should there be any danger, a quarantine should be placed against any from the camp visitant: The Dalles.

Wednesday night the transformer on an electric pole at Salem burned out, causing quite a little excitement on the street. It set fire to the pole and cross trees, but linemen promptly climbed the pole and extinguished the fire, the damage being nominal.

Much interest has been taken in the Students Literary club, and well there might be, for the subjects discussed or lectures given are always instructive and worthy of greater praise than has been given. It has been arranged for tonight to debate the question, "Resolved, That the opportunities for success of young men was greater in the past than at present." All are invited to be present whether members of the club or not.

The lodge of Elks at La Grande will give a swell ball and banquet on the evening of the anniversary of Washington's birthday. Tickets have been placed on sale and can be had for five dollars per couple. All Elks are invited to be present and traveling cards presented at the door will be the only invitation necessary.

Mr. T. Brownhill who has arranged to give a series of lectures in the future, will not be able to keep his appointment at Bennetts school house in Hood River valley on Feb. 23d at 1 p. m. Those living in that vicinity, however, will have an opportunity of hearing him at the Congregational church in Hood River on the same evening.

The court is busy this afternoon selecting a jury in the case of the State vs. J. Herbert Preston. At the hour of going to press only eight jurors had been secured and the regular venire had been exhausted. District Attorney Jayne appears for the state, while Fred W. Wilson and Ned H. Gates are looking after the interests of the defendant.

The steamer Al Ki which just arrived at Seattle from Skagway, brought down a cargo consisting of $10,000 in bullion, the last month's clean-up of the Treadwell Company, and seventy-five boxes of Wrangle Narrows halibut. The Treadwell monthly shipment was only about half the December clean-up of the company, but this is accounted for by the fact that nearly one half of the stamps were idle during January by reason of the water power which operates the plant being frozen up.

Inquiry at the offices of the transportation companies in Portland failed to elicit any further information concerning the rumor that the White Collar Line had disposed of the Telephone and the Bailey Gatzert, or either of them, to parties on the Sound. The report is current in Portland, however, that negotiations with relation to a possible transfer of one or both of the boats have been under way but that there is no definite understanding that a consummation has been arrived at.—Astorian.

Eugene is contemplating the organization of a commercial club and from all indications will have such an institution at no late date. In part the Eugene Guard says: "The question of organizing a commercial club in Eugene often comes up for discussion, particularly after a trip to Salem, Portland, Astoria, The Dalles, or some other city, where the business or professional man of this city is entertained by his acquaintances in well appointed clubs having every convenience and comfort. When it comes to a question of energy in personally conducting individual business matters, the Eugene man stands in the front rank, but in providing a comfortable club for recreation after business hours, and a place to entertain friends and business acquaintances, in a social manner, he has been neglectful."

Shortly after 10 o'clock this morning a telephone message was sent to the engine house saying that the residence of W. H. Butts situated on the corner of Eleventh and Liberty streets was on fire. One alarm was sounded from box 27 and the department answered in short order and in a few minutes was on the way, but by some error it was understood that it was Mr. Butler's property on Fourth street that was on fire. Finding no flames there the department returned and then learned where they were needed. The Columbia's with their hose cart, started a second time for the scene of the conflagration, but when they arrived near Phillips store the re-call alarm was sounded and they retraced their steps. The fire started from a defective flue and burned a hole in the ceiling and a corner of the adjoining room. The house is cloth and papered and it seems a wonder the entire building was not destroyed. However the neighbors turned out and formed a bucket brigade and succeeded in checking the flames before much damage had been done although the entire household furniture and belongings had been removed from the building. The loss as yet has not been estimated but is fully covered by insurance.
