PAUL MOHR ROAD.

Different Opinions of the Press Relative to the New Company.

Active work on the steamboats that will be built here for the Paul Mohr company will begin in the near future. Captain James Cochran is expected to return from Chicago this evening, and as soon as he can arrange the preliminaries the keel for the first boat will be laid.

The plans have been completed and Louis Paquet has made a model for one of the boats. She will be one of the finest-equipped and fastest boats ever constructed in the Northwest, and will be used exclusively as a passenger boat. The other two boats will be adapted to the carrying of both freight and passengers. They will also combine speed and comfort and will be equipped in the latest style.

The movements of the Paul Mohr company have awakened a deep interest among all classes of people. Shippers, steamboatmen and people living along the Columbia river from the mouth of the Willamette to Wenatchee are all interested, and they have great faith in the completion of the enterprise.

The upper terminus of the line has not been definitely settled, as near as can be learned. For three months in the year boats can run between Lewiston and Parco, and it is probable that the P. M. company will push into that country during the good boating stage. Between Riparia and Lewiston boats run most of the year, but between Riparia and Pasco the river can only be navigated in high water .- Telegram.

It is reported by several papers that two steamers are to be constructed at Portland and one at Paeco for the Paul Mohr Transportation Company. This news should be taken with a grain of salt. From appearances it would seem that this enterprise largely consisted of a desire to create the impression that it was in the field for business, while in fact it was promoted for the purpose of

It has applied to congress re-Republican nonination of joint senator peatedly for authority to remedy this evil, but without avail. At last a man has gotten into the department who construes existing law by the rules of common sense, and, as a result, it has been decided that no star route contract will be let to any one who lives remote from the route, and that in future such contracts will only be awarded to persons who live on or adjacent to the routes. If this rule is rigidly enforced, men who have been making money by bidding for many star routes and then sub-letting them to those who live on has made itself manifest by drying up the line for a few dollars less than the the mud and wet sidewalks to such a price they receive, will have to seek other roads to fortune, and the public

T. Peters, that the department was all right but they got somewhat excited. There seems to be a great deal of good natured rivalry between the Columbia Hook and Ladder Co., and whenever a josh can be sprung it is never overlooked. This morning after the excitement was over it was noticed that the Hook and Ladder Co, had placed their ladders sgainst the building upside down. This was the opportunity for the Columbia's to get in their work, so they quietly informed each member of the H. and L. Co. that the fire was on the roof and not in the basement.

However the old adage "He who laughs last laughs best," came beautifully into play when the Columbia's tried to unreel the hose from the chemi:al engine and found for some unknown reason, or through their excitement and haste, it had become tangled and when it was being unreeled it looked something like a long string of sausages with knots tied at frequent intervals. The H. and L. Co., then came in for their fun and asked the Columbias if they were waiting for the second alarm, as they were so slow getting to the fire and after arriving could not use their apparatus for some length of time.

The rivalry which makes itself manifest at all fires is one of the best things that could happen to the department. It enthuses members of different companies and creates a desire to be in the lead upon the scene of action, first for the service that can be rendered, and secondly for the laugh on the other
