THE WORLD'S NEW FINANCIAL CENTER.

The loan of $25,000,000 which Russia has just made in New York is one of many recent evidences that the world's center of financial gravity is shifting to this side of the Atlantic. For many years that center was in Lisbon. Then it went to Amsterdam. Afterward it traveled to London, and it remained there two and a half centuries. Now it is moving to New York.

In many particulars New York has been beating London in recent years. London is still ahead of New York in population, though if the entire metropolitan district around the mouth of the Hudson were counted as one city, as it is in the case of the big town on the Thames, the British city would not contain many more inhabitants than the American center. In many particulars, however, the American city is getting ahead of its rival on the other side of the Atlantic. New York's imports and exports are greater than London's. The aggregate of its bank clearances is much larger than those of England's city. Its growth in those respects, too, is much in excess of that of its rival. The number of millionaires which it contains is much larger.

Russia had the whole world open to it, but it came to New York to float its big loan. The loan, which is guaranteed by the government of the czar, is to be paid, principal and interest, in American money, and in New York. This is not the first loan of a European government which has been floated in this country. The transactions of this sort will undoubtedly be frequent hereafter. The United States is the wealthiest country in the world. In this respect, indeed, it has gone so far beyond the United Kingdom in the past twenty years that its holdings of property of all sorts very nearly equal those of the United Kingdom and France together, which stand second and third on the list, respectively.

A HINT FROM FRANKLIN.

In 1773 Franklin wrote some "rules for reducing a great empire to a small one." They were published in the London Public Advertiser, and were intended for the eyes of the king and his ministers. One of these rules has some application to the pending measure for the government of Puerto Rico, and might be considered with profit by President McKinley and the Republican leaders in congress. Franklin said: "Take special care the provinces are never incorporated with the mother country; that they do not enjoy the same commercial rights, and have the same privileges in common."

The Puerto Rican bill does not grant the people of the island the same commercial rights as are enjoyed by the "mother country" and her other territories. Alaska has free trade with the states. If the pending bill becomes a law, Puerto Rico will not have free trade with this country. It does not alter the principle to say the tariff between Puerto Rico and the United States is only 15 per cent of the existing American tariff. To that extent we are exploiting the island on selfish methods. We are making of Puerto Rico a part, and yet not a part of the common country. We are taxing its people for the use of our markets, and taxing them at both ends of the transaction.

The bill is a squint at imperialism. It weakens our cause with the Filipinos, and it lowers us in the estimation of ourselves and the rest of civilization.—Spokesman-Review.

Catarth Cannot be Cured

with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarth is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies.
