REASON AND SENTIMENT.

Upon the rather poor authority of the New York World, ex-President Harrison is said to be a strong Boer sympathizer. It is stated that "he sees no occasion for enthusiasm over the friendship of the English during the war with Spain, as it was a war against cruelty and clearly for humanity; there was no reason why the British or any other enlightened nation should not have been with America on this proposition." With or without reason, the other enlightened nations of Europe were with Spain and against the United States. All over the continent press comment was rabid against this country.

However, our attitude as between England and the Boers is not so much a matter of reciprocating the friendly sympathy we had from the British, as it is a matter of desiring the higher development of civilization, and of regarding our own national welfare.

The bravery of the Boer soldier is conceded. At no time has his courage been underrated by the Spokesman-Review. In the opening days of the war, it was said in these columns:

"It was demonstrated in 1881 that the Boer is a clever fighter. His environment and his training have taught him all the arts of strategy. For more than 200 years he and his forefathers have been contending with the warlike tribes of South Africa. Two centuries of constant peril and frequent wars with the natives have sharpened his fighting wits amazingly."

The Boers are a brave people. They have a deep religious nature; and in many ways, when their narrow pride has not been offended, nor their suspicious nature excited, they are kindly and admirable.

But when you have paid them this tribute, you have said about all that can be set to the credit of the South African Dutchman. He is slow, unprogressive, unenlightened. What ever South Africa may have in way of progress, enterprise, art, music, literature and higher refinement, has been carried thither by the hated outlander. The outlander has built the railroads, strung the telegraph and telephone lines, developed the mineral wealth of the country, and stood everywhere for enlightened progress.

If the Boers were to themselves on a large island, their sixteenth century methods could be tolerated. Unfortunately, they are upon a vast continent desired by other progressive peoples. If only they were sandwiched in between the British

South African colonies, there might have been some hope of the indefinite continuance of the status quo. But they are commingled with the British and the outlanders. In the British territory of Cape Colony they outnumber the British, while, on the other hand, in the Transvaal republic, at the time hostilities were inaugurated, the outlanders outnumbered the Boers.

To the student of history, nothing is plainer than that Boer or Briton must dominate in South Africa; and the question with Americans ought to be, whose domination will best advance the interests of civilization, and most promote the welfare of our own country? We ought to return an honest answer to that question, and govern our actions by it.—Spokesman-Review.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease.
