A Visit to Japan.

Not everyone possesses the gift of imagination to the degree with which George William Curtis was endowed, so that he may simply stand with his hand on the great bulk of an ocean steamer, and so visit all parts of the world; or gaze through the open door of a huge warehouse, which has just swallowed a cargo of foreign merchandise, until one's whole person is saturated with the spicy odors of some far eastern clime, as described in "Pene and I." But next Monday evening at the Congregational church all may have the opportunity of seeing Japan, in company with one who has spent eleven years in that "land over which the sun first rises; the land which the natives dignify by the name of "Nippon," literally "sun's origin."

Miss Mary F. Denton, a missionary at Yotari, Japan, who was sent out by the Woman's Board of the Pacific Congregational churches and has since been supported solely by them, has recently returned to the United States and is now visiting in Portland. She has consented to come to The Dalles and give the people here an opportunity to learn something directly of her work there. The Congregational women wish to give her a reception which will show, to some extent, their appreciation of her services as a missionary. Therefore, they unselfishly invite all the friends of missions, of all the churches, to share with them, admission free, a delightful evening under pleasant circumstances.

The Same Old Remark. One of the greatest sorrows of famous personages is that it is impossible to live up to the ideal opinion which the people whom they meet in the ordinary affairs of life have formed of them.
It is recorded that a certain literary man of high reputation had occasion to remark to a waiter in the restaurant where he sometimes lunched: "Waiter, this beefsteak is very tough."
The waiter looked at him with a sorrowful expression and sighed deeply. "Perhaps you will tell me," said the literary man, "why you sigh in that fashion?"
"Ah, sir," said the waiter, "I took you for a man who always said original things, and here you come and say the same thing that all the rest of them do." -Tit-Bits.

Automobiles at Paris. The French have been among the most enthusiastic friends of the automobile idea, and during the coming exhibition in Paris they intend to make that style of locomotion as conspicuous and attractive as possible. A special automobile exhibition is to be held in the park of Vincennes, under the direction of the Automobile club of France. Competitive tests and races will be arranged for all kinds of self-moving carriages, and prizes are to be awarded to the winners in the various classes.
