

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

Mrs. T. W. Lee, Montgomery, Ala., writes: "Several years ago I was inoculated with contagious blood poison by a diseased nurse, who infected my baby, and for six long years I suffered untold misery. My body was covered with sores and ulcers. Several physicians treated me, but all to no purpose. The mercury and potash they gave me seemed to add fuel to the awful flame which was devouring me. Friends advised me to try S. S. S. I began taking it and improved from the start, and a complete and perfect cure was the result."

Contagious Blood Poison is the most degrading and destructive of all diseases, as it vitiates and corrupts the entire system. The first sore or ulcer is followed by little red pimples on the body, mouth and throat become sore, the glands enlarge and inflame, copper colored spots appear, and hair and eyebrows fall out. These are some of the milder symptoms; they increase in severity, finally attacking the vital organs; the body is tortured with rheumatic pains and covered with offensive eating sores.

It is a peculiar poison, and so highly contagious that an innocent person handling the same article used by one infected with this loathsome disease, may be inoculated with the virus. It can be transmitted from parent to child, appearing as the same disease or in a modified form—like Eczema or Scrofula.

Many an old sore or stubborn skin trouble appearing in middle life, is due and traceable to blood poison contracted in early life. You may have taken potash and mercury faithfully for two or three years and thought you were cured, but you were not, for these poisonous minerals never cure this disease; they drive it from the outside, but it is doing its work on the inside, and will show up again sooner or later. You may not recognize it as the same old taint, but it is. S. S. S. has cured thousands of cases of Contagious Blood Poison, and it will cure you. It is the only purely vegetable blood purifier known and the only antidote for this poison. S. S. S. cleanses the blood thoroughly of every particle of the poison—there is never any return of the disease.

HE GOT THE WRONG NAME.

The Result Was a Fit of Consternation That Nearly Floored Him.

The man who, while he never forgets faces, cannot always remember the names of the owners thereof, has some mournful experiences. He is like a chip tossed hither and yon on the bosom of a tempestuous sea. It is a dismal thing to be compelled to make believe that you remember the name of the person with whom you are talking on familiar terms, and generally make a sad hash of it. A woman, however, can go on for half an hour or so consulting the fact that she has forgotten the name of the person with whom she is conversing, and the letter will never suspect the nameless niche she occupies in the memory of the dissembler.

A man with a bad memory for names, but an acute memory for faces, was sitting in a corner of a Fourteenth street car the other afternoon, idly wondering why it is that not one woman out of twenty-to-day has her shoes blackened or polished nicely, no matter how elaborately she may be gotten up otherwise, when a superb creature swept into the car, getting on at K street. She recognized the man in the corner of the car instantly, and he recognized her face without being precisely side for ten seconds or so to place it. But they exchanged amiable smiles, and she took the only vacant seat in the car, which happened to be beside the man who couldn't exactly place her on the instant. By the time she had sat down and arranged her skirts, however, the words "Martha's Vineyard" flashed through his mind, and he remembered all about her—that is, everything except her name. He had met her at a Martha's Vineyard hotel last summer, and they had been real close to an eye flirtation when the man was suddenly called away on business. He remembered that she was in Martha's Vineyard without her husband, although he was quite positive that she was a "Mrs.," and he struggled valiantly as he exchanged commonplaces with her in the car, mingled with reminiscences of little matters at Martha's Vineyard during the time they were both there, to remember her name. The embarrassing feature of it was that she had recalled his name as soon as she bowed to him, and she had a huge bulge on him in consequence.

"What a charming view we had from that old hotel up at the Vineyard, did we not, Mr. Fitzpat?" she asked him. "Surely we did, eh—er—Mrs.—um—ta—um—ph—one of the finest views along the Atlantic coast, I verily believe."

"By Jove," he was saying to himself all the time, "I would give a million dollars if I could remember this magnificent woman's name—let's see—Huffkins, Buffkins, Buffkins—no, don't believe it begins with a B at all—Turley Tarley, Tumbley—durn the luck, any, how, I believe I am getting paroxysms."

"See, the crocuses are beginning to peep forth already," said the ravishing creature, whose name the man couldn't remember, pointing to the flower beds in Thomas Circle.

"So they are, Mrs.—er—ah—um—ta—um—" all the queer sounds coming after the "Mrs.," being simply subdued vocal spasms and make believe.

Finally, when the car was "way up Mt. Pleasant, the man suddenly thought of her name. A triumphant light came into his eye, and he said: "Mrs. Pasout, are you thinking of returning to Martha's Vineyard this summer?"

"Yes," she said, graciously, "but I trust you will permit me to request that you address me by a name that I recognize."

The man almost collapsed in his seat. "Isn't Pasout the—er—right—I thought—"

"Oh, yes, I was Mrs. Pasout; but I have got my decree since I met you last, and I am now Miss Birthright again, and it recalls harrowing memories to be called Pasout."

"The next time I can't recall a name instantly," reflected the man, "I'm just going to own up to it, and ask him or her his or her name."—Washington Star.
