

Very Unusual

It is very unusual for a regular physician of good reputation to publicly endorse a proprietary remedy. We have often heard of cases where doctors have secretly prescribed Ackley's English Remedy, but it is most gratifying to receive the following complimentary letter from C. F. Smith, M. D., the most successful physician of Oregon, N. Y.:

"Messrs. W. H. Houghton & Co., New York City: I wish to add my professional testimony to the value of your English Remedy for Asthma, etc. In several instances, after I have tried my utmost to give relief, I have prescribed your remedy, and it has acted almost like a miracle, not only relieving, but permanently curing every one of the patients. I endorse the preparation as one of the most valuable additions to the practice of medicine."

Such a frank endorsement as the above is phenomenal. Coming from so distinguished a member of the medical profession, it carries with it an assurance which the public will be sure to avail themselves of. It is recommended like this which makes it possible to give the broad guarantee that is a part of every sale of Ackley's English Remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. It must either do all that is claimed for it, or your money will be refunded. Do you know of any other medicine sold on these terms? Do you know of any other medicines which prominent doctors regularly prescribe in their own practice as being better than prescriptions they write themselves? These facts are well worth considering. They are of especial interest to those with sore throats and weak lungs.

Sold in 5c, 10c and 25c bottles, throughout the United States and Canada, and in England, at 1s. 6d. as follows: If you are not satisfied after trying, return the bottle to your druggist, and get your money back.

SECOND-HAND UMBRELLAS

The Supply is Never Large, and is Furnished in Part by the Pawnshops.

There are few things that cannot be bought second-hand. One can get second-hand anchors and second-hand books; second-hand gas fixtures and baby carriages; pianos and iron stoves; stands, water coolers and office desks; it would be difficult to think of anything that cannot be bought second-hand. One of the things that at first might be thought to come within the category of things not sold in this manner is the umbrella. Inquiry, however, revealed the fact that umbrellas are sold second-hand though for various simple reasons not so commonly as some other articles of personal wear or use, says the New York Sun.

Common as an article as the umbrella is in use, and familiar to the eye, yet it is far less commonly used than, say, the hat, shoes, etc. In this climate, in winter at least, everybody wears shoes, and so everybody at least one pair. But by no means everybody owns an umbrella. There are in fact plenty of people who never owned one, just as, singular as it may seem to some persons, there are many people who never owned a watch. Then, as anybody can use an umbrella, it may be that a family of half a dozen persons would have only one or two or three umbrellas. There are plenty of big umbrellas for sale, with an aggregate output of millions of umbrellas yearly, but the number of factories and of the umbrellas produced would have to be multiplied if every individual were to be supplied with an umbrella.

A great many umbrellas are destroyed outright, blown inside out in windstorms and made useless for any purpose; it wouldn't pay to repair them, and there is nothing left of them worth mending. People commonly have umbrellas that can be mended, repaired and people often carry an umbrella that is in need of repairs with some thought of its usefulness than of its appearance. The umbrella is commonly used through away until it is useless, and when it is in that condition, unless it were a fine umbrella, it would not pay a second-hand dealer to repair it. For example, it would never do to put a single panel of cloth in an umbrella cap; it wouldn't match the rest and it wouldn't pay to put it in, anyway. Another reason why there are not more umbrellas sold second-hand is that new umbrellas are so cheap. New umbrellas of some kind can be bought in these days remarkably cheap, and persons who might otherwise seek second-hand umbrellas, buy new ones; they wouldn't expect to get them second-hand at any lower price.

But after all, there are to be found second-hand umbrellas, just as there are to be found second-hand hats and shoes, though in smaller numbers. Some of them are bought by the old clothes men.

Another place at which second-hand umbrellas can be bought is the pawnshops; in the pawnshops where personal property of all sorts is sold, umbrellas come in with the rest of the things offered; they are not common offerings, like some things, but not unusual. These, if not sold, go with other condemned and second-hand things to the pawnshop's second store, where they are bought by second-hand dealers who sell that kind of goods, in addition to the comparatively limited number bought in the usual manner.
