

A Grocer Says

"I guess everybody in Bellevue, Ohio, knows O. B. Callaghan, the grocer. I am in his employ, and am about as well known as he is. A grocer is a place where you have cold gusts of wind coming in every time the door opens, and there is a good deal of hunting about out-doors too. Anyhow, I catch cold very often, but the minute I begin to sneeze I reach up on the shelf and take a dose of Acker's English Remedy. I tell you it is wonderful how quickly it stops a cough or cold. I have used it myself, and in my family for a number of years. It works like a charm. I suppose some of the folks would have run into consumption before this if I had neglected to keep a bottle ready all the time for immediate use. I wouldn't think of using anything else for throat and lung troubles. I know what Acker's Remedy actually does, so what sense is there in experimenting? Certainly it is better than chance." (Signed) JOHN HORT.

Sold at 25c, 50c and $1 a bottle, throughout the United States and Canada, and in England, at 1s, 2s, 3s, 4s, 6d. If you are not satisfied after buying, return the bottle to your druggist, and get your money back.

A Difficult Problem.

It is among the most difficult problems of natural science for one to become expert in several lines. J. E. Adeox & Co., by their combination, have overcome this difficulty in a practical manner. J. E. Adeox is an expert watchmaker and is good on jewelry, optical work and engraving, while Theo. H. Lithe is an expert optician and is good on watch repairing, jewelry work and engraving. Their prices are as low as consistent with good workmanship. They are prepared to do all work in their several lines, on short notice. Work sent by mail or express will receive prompt attention. Sign, "Big Red Watch."

STORY OF JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

How the Former Champion Pugilist Fought the Sports at the Town of Astoria, Ore.

In the fall of 1899 John L. Sullivan was touring the far west with his "grand aggregation of sports," taking on "tough guys" as he used to say, in the big cities, and giving exhibitions in the smaller towns. When John L. reached Portland, Ore., the citizens of Astoria, 100 miles away at the mouth of the Columbia river, determined that the fighter should not go away from the coast before they got a chance to "look him over."

Astoria is a prosperous town of 10,000 people, and half of the population is engaged in the salmon industry. Most of the 3,000 fishermen are Russian "Fins," and in the fall they are paid off by the various canneries, and generally have more $20 gold pieces than they know what to do with. One of their number, Eugene Sylvester, had a great local reputation for strength. He measured six feet four inches, weighed 250 pounds, and had a pair of hands like baseball mitts. He could lift an end of a Columbia river fishing boat and topple it over without any trouble. If you ever have seen one of these boats you will know what that means. His Russian Finn brethren did not believe that the man ever lived who could stand up before Sylvester in a ring. So it came about that one day they held an enthusiastic meeting and sent word to Portland that if John L. Sullivan cared to make a trip down the river Mr. Sylvester would take great pleasure in knocking him into the Pacific ocean.

John's sporting friends, seeing the prospect of a big bet, advised him to go, and he went. All the details were quickly arranged, and each side put up $1,000 in a wager that Sylvester could stay four rounds. Seconds and timekeepers were chosen, and a ring was hastily rigged up on the stage of the Astoria opera house.

A stock company was playing "Queen's Evidence" there at the time, but had been persuaded to give up one night to the fistie exhibition; the "Queen's Evidence" scenery for the first act remained in place. On the night when the battle was to come off Sullivan and his friends figured that they had wagered $20,000 with various Russian Finn enthusiasts on the result. The Fins had heard rumors that at a critical stage of the fight, when their man was pouncing the daylight out of John L., the electric lights were to be turned off and their champion robbed of his victory. So they came prepared for any emergency, nearly 2,000 of them occupying seats in the theater, every man with his revolver and a lighted lamp under his chair.

The men go into the ring pretty well stripped, Sullivan doing his best to look scared to death and Sylvester strutting around the stage and almost howling his head off in recognition of the applause from his friends. He had wagered every cent he could raise, as well as his fishing boat and nets, with a bow-legged little man on Sullivan's staff called "Beacher."

The referee called time and they went at it. Sylvester stood still for a minute and then made a furious dash at Sullivan, who broke ground and ran in an appealing manner around the ring. The Fins stood up and waved their lanterns about their heads in their enthusiasm. All through the round, as Eugene chased John from one post to the other, they kept up a magnificent though somewhat obscure series of yells in their native language, and when it was over and Sullivan sank back in his chair netting the part of a man on his last pins they immediately proceeded to bet any stray gold pieces that they had not before been able to place.

When the second round began, Sylvester, evidently thinking that Sullivan was practically out, did a few stunts in the middle of the ring and walked around, intimating by dumb show that "Sullivan" as the Fins called him, was the easiest mark he had ever handled. All through the round Sullivan continued to run away, once in awhile varying his groans—please inches with wild swings that never got closer than three feet to Sylvester. At the call of time John sank on both knees and allowed himself to be dragged to his chair by his seconds with well simulated agony on his face.

A few moments before the third round Sylvester began to jump about on his feet like a kitten, and, keeping his eye on John, yelled to his compatriots to bet their skins on him. Wrought up to a pitch of enthusiasm by the appearance of things they began to do pretty much what he advised, and as fast as they offered to wager anything John's friends in the crowd took them up.

Eugene advanced with a light-hearted spring, evidently intending to finish his man before the round was over. After about a minute's sprinting Sullivan suddenly, to the astonishment of his opponent, stood still and let him catch up. Then coolly letting go his left leg caught Sylvester under the jaw and lifted nearly 200 pounds of Russian Finn clean over the ropes and through the scenery a few feet from the spot he had designated.

Sullivan and the "gang" left town next morning, taking with them almost a literal barrel of money. The Russian Finn spent the hardest winter in their history. As for Sylvester, he never got on his feet sufficiently to purchase a new boat or nets and finally became a boat puller. A few years later he developed a mild form of insanity and is now in the Oregon state insane asylum, Chicago Tribune.

Unless food is digested quickly it will ferment and irritate the stomach. After each meal take a teaspoonful of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It digests what you eat and will allow you to eat all you need of what you like. It never fails to cure the worst cases of dyspepsia. It is pleasant to take.

Rev. W. E. Sitzer, W. Canton, N. Y., writes: "I had dyspepsia over twenty years, and tried doctors and medicines without benefit. I was persuaded to use Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and it helped me from the start. I believe it to be a panacea for all forms of indigestion." It digests what you eat.

Ivy poisoning, poison wounds and all other accidental injuries may be quickly cured by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It is also a certain cure for piles and skin diseases. Take no other.
