WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Ladies tan low shoes only 90 cents at the New York Cash store.

Orders by telephone or otherwise are promptly filled at the McNeal market.

A fresh supply of Lowney's chocolates received today at Blakeley's pharmacy.

Workmen will begin tearing down the old Baptist church today, preparatory to erecting a new building.

M. M. Cushing recovered sufficiently to be moved to his home about five miles from the city Saturday.

During the entire week there will be a sale of street hats and sailors at the Campbell & Wilson millinery parlors. Great reductions. 16-1w

B. H. Grant arrived in our city a week or two since and today opened the Roseleaf cigar store, on Second street, which he has renovated thoroughly and put in a new stock.

We learn that a few days since the body of Robert Rintoul, son of Mrs. Spink, who was drowned in the Snake river, was recovered four miles below the place where he sank.

Yesterday on complaint of his mother, Helen Grindall, Harry Grindall, an incorrigible lad of 13 years, was committed to the reform school and taken down to Salem by Deputy Sexton.

Among the real estate transfers published in the Oregonian we noticed that Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Lytle have purchased the home of J. C. Moreland, at Mount Tabor. This is one of the prettiest homes in that neighborhood.

An exchange says the wages paid on the farms at this time range from $2 to $3 per day and board, the "chore" boy having no trouble now to get his $1.50 and board. Handsome wages, indeed, as compared with those paid for similar services four years ago.

The friends of Mrs. Isabelle Gray, who left some time since for Scotland, have been anxiously awaiting news of her safe arrival. In a letter received yesterday by Mrs. Brooks she informs her of a very pleasant journey, a safe arrival and happy meeting with relatives and friends.

A letter received from Hugh Gourlay, editor of THE CHRONICLE, informs us he will return home tomorrow night and resume his duties Wednesday. He has our most profound sympathy, as the festive item is also on a vacation or any old place except where the reporter expects to find it; and in desperate straits we are inclined to take the advice of our friend, Cradiebaugh, and taking our pencil in hand fill the local page with the fact that now is the time to subscribe.

Company D returned home on the noon train yesterday, delighted with their outing. They left Camp Geer at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, remaining in Portland till the Sunday morning train left. Our company made a showing none of them are ashamed of.

The first wheat received at the Wasco warehouse came in Saturday and this morning the first load came to Moody's warehouse. The latter, which was volunteer crop, came from Dry Hollow and we are told averaged sixty pounds to the bushel and twenty bushels to the acre.

The members of Friendship lodge have a special inducement to make an effort to attend lodge tonight, as Grand Chancellor Kennedy, who will arrive from Portland this evening, will make them an official visit upon that occasion. The session will be especially interesting.

The thousands of horses in this county, which have been all but worthless for a number of years, seem destined to bring in great wealth to the county, says the Wallowa News. Band after band is leaving the county, shipped by the owners, and buyers are becoming more numerous every day. The raising of horses in the county will receive new impetus.

We call attention to the advertisement of the State Normal school at Monmouth appearing in another column of this issue. The school reports a successful year, with encouraging prospects for the next session. Many teachers are taking the Normal course both for the sake of the professional training, now pretty generally demanded, and also as the best means of preparation for securing the state papers.

Gov. T. T. Geer yesterday received a letter from his son, Fred H. Geer, who is at Cape Nome. Mr. Geer Jr. paints a gloomy picture of the camp. His tentmate, Mr. Brandenburg, was down with the smallpox, which was prevalent, and the writer expected to be taken down with the same disease. Men were shot almost daily, and every day two or three suicides were reported and no one blamed the poor unfortunates. Governor Geer promptly answered the letter, urging his son to return to civilization, and not to risk his life or health any longer in that desolate place. The young man will probably return soon.—Statesman.

Dalles people would do well to look out for a confidence man who has been working in the outskirts of Portland, catching victims at $1 a head, and may, in striking for greener fields, reach The Dalles. The man is running a drawing game, and goes from house to house with a grip full of envelopes, from which anyone may draw on the payment of $1. Some envelopes, of course, contain blanks. But others are cards on which are written, "Full set of harness," or "valuable gold watch." The "lucky" person who draws a prize is promised delivery of the article won, on a certain date, and that is the end of the transaction so far as the steerer is concerned. Sunnyside has been thoroughly canvassed, and the following description of the man was given by victims there: Height, 5 feet 7 inches; weight, 145 or 150 pounds; sandy complexion, sandy mustache, dark coat, brown trousers and black stiff hat.

Again Superintendent Gilbert is at work; this time preparing for the county institute, which will meet at Hood River on the 29th, 30th and 31st of next month. This session will be a genuine vacation treat for the teachers. Instead of preparing papers themselves, Mr. Gilbert will employ instructors, who furnish papers themselves, and the teachers will become pupils, being allowed, however, to discuss and freely give their opinion on the subjects brought up. By way of diversion, among other things a trip to Cloud Cap Inn is being planned, which in itself will be an outing envied by all. There will surely be a large attendance at the institute.

One of the most interesting visitors a newspaper office (or any other office or individual) can have, is the untiring assistant secretary of the Oregon Historical Society, George H. Himes, who is thoroughly versed in everything connected with the history of our state, and its future development. THE CHRONICLE enjoyed a call this morning from the gentleman, who is on his way to the eastern part of the state in the interest of the society. It was incorporated December 17th, 1888, and he informs us they now have a membership of over 500. On the 16th of last December the rooms of the society were opened and since that time 6000 visitors have registered from all parts of the union, and information is continually being given out. During the visit of the editors to our state last year, probable no one did more toward enlightening them concerning the state they were so favorably impressed with than did Mr. Himes, who was constantly answering questions and providing means of entertainment.

Dissolution Notice.

The copartnership business heretofore conducted at 175 Second street, under the firm name and style of Blakeley & Houghton, is this day dissolved by mutual consent, F. L. Houghton retiring from said firm. The business will be conducted in the future by Geo. C. Blakeley, at the old stand. F. L. Houghton will collect all accounts and pay all liabilities of said firm.

ONE MORE UNFORTUNATE.

This Time a Young Man Meets Death While Stealing a Ride.

It would seem only reasonable that having had so many lessons of fatalities caused by stealing rides on railroad trains, the foolish practice would cease. Such, however, is not the case, and almost every week the newspapers contain notices of "one more unfortunate." This time the victim is a young man not over 25, fine looking, well dressed, smooth shaven, about 5 feet 10½ in height, and had all the appearance of having been brought up a gentleman. We understand that he came from a well-to-do respectable family in Detroit, Mich., who no doubt are anxiously awaiting news from the wandering boy. From what we can learn he is a violinist and has been wandering from place to place over the union, a book containing a memorandum of the different places visited being found in his pocket, with his impressions of them in connection, written in a splendid hand. But he found his grave in the city cemetery at The Dalles this morning, having come to his death in the following manner:

From the testimony of a man named Remington, who is employed by Ward & Robinson, he was in Bridal Veil Wednesday, and ascending Remington asked him who he was, etc. He in turn said his name was F. H. Weber; that he was a musician and that he didn't intend to work; that he made some money by playing, but was going to steal a ride up. Thursday Remington saw him in this city, then yesterday recognized him as he lay a corpse in Crandall & Barger's undertaking parlors.

Saturday afternoon the cook on the diner attached to No. 2, eastbound, saw a man fall off the train as they reached Quinn's, fourteen miles this side of Arlington. Before he could inform Conductor Glendenning they were two or three miles beyond. He accordingly wrote a note and handed it to Conductor Thompson at Castle Rock telling them to look out for a man. They found the spot where he was knocked off and between fifty and one hundred yards farther came across the man, who had crawled there. He said he was riding on the step of a car with two companions and was knocked off by a sand board, which shows he must have leaned out very far to have struck the board, which always clears the track well. He struck on the back of the head and both hands were badly cut, as if they had been run over.

The men carried him into the caboose and he answered several questions, telling where he was from and his name; said he realized he was badly hurt; but he grew worse and only moaned the remainder of the distance, dying about 8:30 o'clock, just after they pulled into the yard here and before Dr. Logan, who was called, could reach there.

Among a few articles found in his pocket were three postal cards, one addressed to the postmaster at a certain place ordering any letters which came to F. H. Weber or F. W. Habenicht to be forwarded, causing the presumption that he traveled under both names.

The verdict of the coroner's jury was according to the above facts.

Death of H. P. Isaacs.

H. P. Isaacs, well-known throughout Oregon and Washington and one of the most successful business men on the coast, owning large flouring mills at various points, died suddenly Saturday morning at the Imperial hotel in Portland. He arrived on the morning train from Walla Walla and complained to Mr. Knowles of having had a chill on the train, and requested him to send a physician to his room. Calling a short time afterward Dr. Macrum found him dead in bed, and a coroner's inquest proved that the cause was heart failure. His son, E. C. Isaacs arrived in Portland and his remains were taken to Walla Walla, where his family resides, for burial. In the early 50's Mr. Isaacs was in business in The Dalles, carrying on a large mercantile business in a stone building which stood on the present site of the Columbia hotel. Leaving this city about '61, he went to Walla Walla, engaging in the flouring mill business, and later extended his interests into Idaho, until he has become known throughout the Northwest as a business man of wonderful sagacity. But with all his varied and pressing interests, his life was filled with kind acts and generous impulses, and he will be sadly missed. Mr. Isaacs was about 75 years of age.

It will be remembered that several months since a drunken baker by the name of Bower, who was arrested made things lively in the jail beating his head against the bars and otherwise injuring himself. Shortly afterward he left for Portland, where he has since remained; but "a bad penny always returns," and Bower came back. Saturday night he again got on a spree, and proceeding to his wife's home, where she has been supporting herself by taking in washing, began to mistreat her. She at once complained to the marshal and he was again locked up. Being desirous, however, of ridding herself of him, the poor woman offered to pay his expenses back to Portland. The nightwatchman therefore saw that he boarded the morning train and she will live in peace for a short time at least.
