The funeral of H. P. Isaacs, who died so suddenly in Portland Saturday, took place this morning at 9 o'clock at his home in Walla Walla, under the auspices of the Masonic order.

Lee Moorhouse, Pendleton's famous artist, visited Hood River Sunday and secured some valuable pictures of old Indian relics and buildings across the Columbia from that point.

Henry Ramsey, the old gentleman from Mayville, who came near losing his life Friday in a runaway accident at Albany, is still in a very serious condition at the home of his son-in-law at that place.

The city is $2 ahead on a fight which occurred Sunday. The pugilist was arrested on that date and put up that amount for his appearance this morning. He failed, however to connect, but his $2 is still in the hands of the recorder.

This morning, while working at the planing mill, Carl Hansen caught the little finger of the left hand in the saw and it was sawed into the bone, making a very painful wound. Dr. Geisendorfer dressed it and it is thought no permanent injury will result.

A friend of Rev. G. Rushing, whom we mentioned a few days since as being very ill at Spokane, says our informant must have been mistaken, as a letter received this morning, tells her he is improving, and a few days since rode five miles on his wheel.

Newspaper people seem to have no doubt of McKinley's election and consequent prosperity, from the number of new journals which are daily received. The latest is the Condon Times, which is published each Saturday, and starts out as if it meant business. We trust it will continue in as lively spirits.

Thank fortune, people are getting over the foolish habit of accusing every one with "Is it warm enough for you," and it is easier to keep cool. We really have little reason to complain as yet this season. The warmest weather we have had was last month, when the thermometer stood at 96 one day. Last Sunday it was 91; yesterday 88, and today not over 84 at 3:30 o'clock.

One forest fire in California has burned a tract of twenty square miles. One little firecracker was the cause of the disaster. One negligent campfire in the forests of our state is liable to spread to thousands of acres of timber. Perhaps the hint may cause hunting parties and campers to be more cautious than usual while the ground and foliage are so dry.

At present our scouring mill is running on a full day time, and employing about forty persons, turning out an average of 15,000 pounds of scoured wool. Under the immediate necessity of a night run, this amount will be increased to between 30,000 and 35,000 pounds in the near future. The mills have sold their output to date, and have sufficient orders on hand for a month to come. The returns from samples sent to manufacturers have invariably brought favorably comment.

If there's one thing above another that The Dalles needs, it is a hospital. There is really no necessity for our people and those who come in from the country about us being compelled to go to the expense of going clear to Portland to be treated for ailments and for operations with which our own physicians are equally competent to cope. Leaving the more critical cases out of the question, there are numberless persons who are taken to the metropolis each month who could just as well be treated if there were only some place to which they could be taken. Our physicians should, with the help of the leading citizens, make a move toward establishing a hospital here.

Hood River is the latest place to report a drowning. Yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock two men, John Dye and a man whose name we could not learn, attempted to cross the river to White Salmon in a small boat, when the wind was extremely high and the river rough. When about the middle of the stream the boat capsized. Ed Underwood, who saw them from the Washington side, attempted to reach them; but in vain. The boat drifted down to Nicholas' mill, four miles below Hood River, and was picked up by some of the workmen, when they found one of the men still clinging to the boat. With difficulty they restored him; but at the time the message was telephoned up to Hood River, no one knew his name, and therefore could give no information as to which of the unfortunates was saved.

Of late years the various denominations are sensibly coming to the conclusion that a minister is made of the same material as other men, and therefore need a respite from duties during the heated term as well as they. Accordingly Dalles people will be compelled to take their nap at home Sunday evenings, instead of in their pew at church, for a month at least. Already the Congregationalists are having but one service a day; for the following four weeks the Methodists will do the same; during the month of August the Lutherans will have no service at all; and 'tis more than likely the Baptists will dispense with service for a portion of the time, as the old building is already unfit for use. Protestants, therefore, can remain at home Sunday evenings.

Serious trouble is brewing on the Union Pacific and it is feared that there will be a general strike if the company attempts to enforce a new rule in reference to the watch inspector of the Union Pacific. The engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen, switchmen, yardmasters, telegraphers, station agents, baggage men, and section foremen were instructed that all those who did not carry a 17-jeweled nickel-movement watch of a certain make would have to buy one. The request has been complied with by a few employes, but a large number refuse and say they will quit work before they will be coerced. Firemen on the third district from North Platte to Sidney are reported to have made a determined stand, and it is said they have notified the company if the rule is enforced they will walk out together.

If any have the least doubt in their minds that the new woman (and many not quite so new) has not made up her mind to be the competitor of the "stronger" sex in every avenue of life from the least to the greatest, from the foolish to the most foolish, etc., let them read a dispatch from Saginaw, Mich., yesterday which says: "Miss Marie Schmidt, aged 18 years, reached this city last night from San Francisco, having covered the entire distance on foot, about 4700 miles. Miss Schmidt left San Francisco March 25 last on a $500 wager, made by a social club of San Francisco, that she could not reach Saginaw by August 1 and beg her living en route." We would just add "what next?" Surely it is time to call a halt. It has been idiotic enough in men to go traveling through the country on such senseless expeditions; but when it comes to a woman (much less a girl of 18) aping her brothers in such foolishness, we wonder what this age will not bring forth. If it has become necessary for her to enter the business world and compete with him along that line, for the love of everything womanly in her nature, it is to be hoped she will not at the same time adopt all the foibles which he has seen fit to indulge in.

Keep Cool.

Advice to "keep cool" is good at all times, but never better than in the heated term which now seems fairly upon this section. One method is to seek the mountain resort or the seacoast, where breezes temper the fierceness of the sun's rays. But all city workers are not able to drop their business and leave town. It is possible to keep cool and stay at home if one will observe ordinary precautions. One authority puts it this way:

The proper diet for the season is a light and simple one, consisting largely of fresh fruit and vegetables, and only to a limited extent of meat. Alcohol should be used much more discriminately than in winter. It predisposes to sunstroke. A free indulgence in iced drinks of any kind is to be deprecated. Cold fluids in the stomach are far more prejudicial to health than cool ones. The internal chill produced by the former, no matter how refreshing for the moment, is likely to cause congestion at some other part of the system and work serious injury. It is to be borne in mind, too, that many edibles and some potables deteriorate rapidly in warm weather. This is particularly true of meat, fish, fruit and milk. Too great pains can not well be taken to insure their preservation. And the fresher milk is when drank the better for the drinker. Ptomaine poisoning and disorders of the intestinal tract, work a vast deal of mischief when the mercury gets up to the 90s and shows a disposition to linger there.

The maintenance of health at this time of year is fully as dependent on sleep as food. As has already been intimated, susceptibility to many of the ills that flesh is heir to—colds and pneumonia in winter and malarial and gastric trouble in summer—is largely controlled by the state of the nervous system. If this is kept toned up by plenty of refreshing sleep, a greater power of resistance to threatened disorders results; whereas, if an adequate supply of nature's sweet restorer is not to be had, one's endurance is sensibly impaired.

Fortunately, the people of this section always enjoy cool nights. The hottest day is succeeded by a pleasant evening and one can enjoy a good night's rest. If people observe the simple rules of health there need be no distress from heat.

Should Be Investigated.

EDITOR CHRONICLE.—There are a number of questions regarding the morals of The Dalles, which seem to be entirely overlooked by the officers of our city, and one in particular the people of the middle hill feel that the authorities should look into and, if their suspicions can be proven, put a stop to. I refer to the characters of a man and woman who it is believed are living in direct violation of the law of the land, their abode being near the garrison. Not only do we consider such to be the case; but worse, young girls are continually enticed in companionship with them, which will undoubtedly be their ruin.

Should not something be done to put a stop to such proceedings?
