The Dalles Daily Chronicle.

MONDAY . . . JULY 23, 1900

For President-WILLIAM M'KINLEY. or Ohio.

For Vice-President-THEODORE ROOSEVELT. of New York

THE CHRONICLE wonders if the parents and guardians of The Dalles young people of both sexes, who go Meredith. on Sunday excursions to Bonneville. really dream of the orgies that some of them participate in. If this paper told the half of what comes to its ears of these Sunday carousals it would make every self-respecting person in The Dalles blush for shame. Suffice it to say that it is the sober judgment of persons who she hurriedly left the parlor, and fly have reluctantly witnessed some of these drunken and beastly exhibitions that strangers who have also wilnessed them must think The Dalles is a community of drunkards andworse.

democratic journal published at Walia Walia, calls on the Chronicle for "a few explanations" about the pillow. Spokane bank clearances. No explanations are needed. Here they are for the first six months of 1896, the last year of democratic rule, and the first half of 1900, with William McKinley in the White House:

We have bad many ridiculous things in American politics but nothing quite so absolutely ridicu. FRENCH & CO., lous as a set of able-bodied American citizens working themselves into a FRANKACTA ENERALBANKING BUSINES frenzy over an imaginary spook that Letters of Credit issued available in the they have dubbed imperialism, and with which they think to scare sensible people into voting for the most absolute political dictator American in Oregon and Washington. politics has known since the days of Andrew Jackson.

A patent boiler-plate editorial squib going the rounds of the Bryanite press says: "Bryan and a republic or McKinley and an empire. Which shall it be?" That isn't the alternative The Chronicle figures out. We would put it: "Bryan and free soup, free silver, free trade and free riot, or McKinley and the best times the country has ever known."

The Colfax Gazette thinks that "if democratic deserters were shot, the party would have to lay in a great supply of guns and ammunition this

The Wife Saved It.

The story is going the councis that when Rodyard Kipling and written 'The Recessional," which the editor of the London Times declared to be the greatest poem written in the nineteenth century, and which the whole world has received as one of the greatest pieces of work in our time, he was so depressed by its shortenings that he threw the first rough copy into the waste paper basket. But Mrs. Kipling has learned her husband pretty well. and so she rescued it. But for Mrs. unknown member of the home partnership.
