Sawing Wood... Pick for

We mean advertising when we say "sawing wood." That's a term a celebrated advertiser gave the art some years ago. We advertise more than ever because we are receiving a larger stock than we ever had before and expect to have a larger trade than any previous season.

With us the quality of our advertising is not strained—but dropped as the gentle rain from heaven upon the place beneath; into the public mind—it twice doth service, it blesseth him who prints and him who reads. Aside from reading our ads we want you to investigate our stock and trade with us.

This afternoon Marshal Driver sold in front of his office, on Court street, two impounded animals of the horse persuasion. One was a yearling colt, owner unknown, and was knocked down to a party by the name of Johnson for $2.50. The other was a horse belonging to a squaw, who refused to redeem it for the charges of $1.60. It was knocked down to Mr. Carnaby for $4.

The CHRONICLE is pleased to learn that Mr. A. H. Curtiss, who was severely injured a few days ago by falling from a platform at the back of his flouring mill in the East-End, is very much better this morning than he has been at any time since the accident. He spent a restful night last night and was able this morning to dress himself and eat breakfast with his family.

W. T. Goblen died yesterday of paralysis, at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Green, on the W. H. Steel ranch, near Five-Mile creek, aged 70 years. The deceased came here from Iowa about a year ago. He was very highly esteemed by the people surrounding his new home. He leaves a wife and one daughter. The remains were interred this afternoon in the Odd Fellows cemetery.

The drummers are scurrying to Portland like geese to the north in spring, says the Fossil Journal. Over two dozen passed through Fossil this week, all bound to take a hand in the Elks' carnival. One chap, C. W. VanAmringe, Coblenz & Levy's man, had a collection of several hundred elk teeth in his grip, and his manly bosom and wrists were studded with them, mounted in weird, fantastic shapes.

F. J. Graham, master mechanic of the O. R. & N. Co., Portland, R. H. Birdsall and R. E. Simmons, Portland druggists, passed through town today on their way home from a prairie chicken hunt on the Tygh ridge, where they were the guests of Patrick Bolton. They succeeded in bagging fifty-three chickens, and, for the time they were on the hunt, averaged closely up to the legal limit of fifteen a day each.

Died, at Rufus, Sherman county, September 1st, Mrs. Jessie Macnab, wife of William Macnab, aged 52 years and 22 days. Mrs. Macnab was a native of Scotland. The remains were embalmed by Messrs Nitechke and Crandall, of this city, and shipped for interment to Ash Creek, Minn. The deceased leaves a husband and one son, the latter aged about 22. The cause of death was paralysis. Mrs. Macnab was a very estimable woman and was much beloved by a large circle of neighbors and acquaintances.

The exclusion of sheep from the forest reserve has many sides to it. Said a wealthy Tygh ridge sheepman to the CHRONICLE man this morning: "My sheep are ranging nine miles west of Dufur when they ought to be, and I wish they were, twenty miles from that place. West of me is the reservation line which I am not permitted to cross, where there is a vast range that is of no practical use to anybody, and where sheep, if they do any injury to anybody or anything, would be less injurious to the interests of the settlers on the prairie than where I am compelled to keep them."

The published report that the forest reserves were closed to sheep was the first intimation that Yakima sheepmen have had that they would not be allowed on the reserves hereafter. No official orders have been received, and the flocks are still on the ranges. In case the report should prove to be true, no hardship would be worked on Central Washington sheepmen this year, as the season is about over, and the sheep will soon be driven down to the valley for the winter. If the reserves are closed next year, owners of 250,000 sheep who reside there will either have to go out of the business or move their flocks elsewhere in search of ranges.

John Flock, who has been in the harness and bee business in Mitchell for several years, passed through Fossil Wednesday en route to Walla Walla with his family, with the intention of locating and engaging in bee culture in that vicinity. Mr. Flock's harness business was small, and to augment the meagre income from that he purchased a few hives of bees some years ago, which grew to a hundred hives, from which he sold $1500 worth of honey during the past year. He sold his harness business to J. W. Boone, of Prineville, who will run it as a branch establishment, and his bees to Jas. Payne, who has since sold them to Jas. Province.—Fossil Journal.

The Dalles & Columbia Southern railroad company is now engaged in making a survey up the Deschutes and on the south towards Klamath county. A corps of surveyors under Civil Engineer C. Anderson, are now camped at the Cove, near T. F. McAllister's place on lower Crooked river, the survey having been completed to within two or three miles of that place. Our informant, D. W. Barnett, states that so far the route has been found perfectly feasible and practicable. The route is by the way of Dufur, Tygh valley, then down White river to a point near the falls, thence up the Deschutes canyon to some point above the mouth of Crooked river, where it can be run out on to the general level. The Corvallis & Eastern, which will enter the "promised land" over the Cascades from the west, is said to be also locating grade stakes and getting a complete right of way for immediate action.—Crook County Journal.

A contract has been entered into and filed in the county clerk's office between W. H. Van Bebber and wife and C. V. Champlin and wife, parties of the first part, and P. L. Kretzer, George T. Parr and A. M. Kelsay, parties of the second part, whereby Messrs. VanBebber and Champlin grant to Messrs. Kretzer, Parr and Kelsay the right to go upon certain lands owned by them in the neighborhood of Chenoweth creek for the purpose of prospecting for coal, oil, iron and all other minerals of whatsoever kind or nature, including natural gas, by boring or any other means that may be deemed proper or advisable. In case the parties of the second part discover on the premises in question sufficient quantities of coal or other minerals mentioned to warrant the development of such discoveries, they bind themselves to convey to the parties of the first part an undivided half interest in such coal or other minerals, and also full rights of way to and from such places upon such premises as may be selected for carrying on of work of prospecting and developing said mines, together with such tract of land, not exceeding ten acres, as may be necessary for the development of said mines and for dumping grounds. Messrs. Kretzer, Parr and Kelsay are to commence prospecting within one year and to continue the same without interruption for a longer period than three months under penalty of cancellation of contract.

Year's Result of Forest Supervision.

Hon. W. H. H. Dufur, forest supervisor of the northern division of the Cascade and Bull Run reserves, while in town this afternoon informed THE CHRONICLE that up to August 31st, when he left the reserve for his office at Dufur, not a dollar's worth of timber had been destroyed by fire this season on the portion of the reserve under his jurisdiction. This result of government supervision is all the more marked as the present season on the reserve is said to be the driest known to the oldest inhabitant. It must not be inferred that there were any fewer camp fires than usual. As a matter of fact there were more; but they were under such a rigid supervision that they were never allowed to spread. Besides, Mr. Dufur had offered a reward of $100 from his own private purse for the arrest and conviction of any party who set out a fire maliciously, and $50 in case of any set out through carelessness. Notice of this reward was posted in every part of his jurisdiction, and undoubtedly contributed to the general result.

Wapinitia "Blow Holes."

The Dalles correspondent of the Telegram recently wrote a very interesting and quite truthful article on the "blow hole" on the Kelly ranch, near Wapinitia; reciting the instance of a well 110 feet deep that blows out and sucks in wind with the regularity of the tides and maintains a temperature that has been turned to useful account for dairy purposes and is practically uniform the year through. But the correspondent, born and reared in the environment of city life, more than forty miles from the "Kelly blow hole," is excusable for not knowing everything connected with this interesting phenomenon. He forgot to mention, or, what is more probable, did not know, that the Kelly "blow hole" for a long time furnished a species of Eolian music for the Wapinitia neighborhood. The original owner of the "blow hole," now, alas! gone the way of all the earth, bethought himself of adjusting a French harp at the mouth of the hole so as to catch the wind "a cousin and a goin'," as it were, with the astonishing result that in days of republican prosperity it sang "Yankee Doodle," "America," "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Come ye that love the Lord, and let your joys be known." But as long as the curse of Bryanism overshadowed the Wapinitia land, its only refrain was "Come ye calamities, where e're ye wander. Down on your marrow bones fervently kneel."

Nor is the "Kelly blow hole" the only one in the Wapinitia country. There are probably a dozen more, although none but the Kelly hole has ever been adjusted to music. There is one on the L. M. Woodside ranch; one on the old Enfield Farris ranch; one on the Chris Confer ranch, and the biggest of the lot is on the West Ray ranch, which is appropriately located near the big sheep ranch of Frank Gabel, on Wapinitia creek, where a "blow hole" that would not sing the praises of McKinley prosperity, an honest dollar and protection to American industry would be plugged so quick that it would never know that it had an existence.
