"A FEW - FOOLISH NOTIONS."

S. M. Clark, one of the brightest and labor. minds that has ever engaged in journalism, died a few weeks ago the men of whom it can be said with is considered, is unexplainable." serious meaning that the world is better by his having lived in it. Mr. Clark was not an adherent of any church; in fact he was known to have decided opposition to the forms of Caristian religion, and was generally known as an agnostic, but his real heart-feelings relative to the eternal side of life are well illustrated by an editorial which he wrote some years ago and which has been reproduced by the Gate City. A correspondent wrose to Mr. Clark, asking him to use his pen to "kill off Christianity" and this is his editorial

"So the man and the bour have come at last. But the Gate City must be content to go its way with humbler matters. It was not made for so great a part in the world as killing off Obristianity. And then we have got some ridiculous superstitions that we cling to. Of course it is very cowardly and abject in us. but we are not great and wise and must go our small, foolish way. But we do know that | when we see a mother looking into the face of the read child in its white shroud.

with its waxen little hands folded, we are glad there is a voice sounding to the ear through all these nineteen centuries: "Suffer little children to its white shroud the skip of the skip come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Administrator, with the will annexed, of t And when the wife moans beside her dead busband it does seem sometimes worth while somebody has said, in a strong masterly way: "I am the resurrection and the life." And when the father or mother dies who has lived a life so good and pure, that it sweetens even the life of the censorious into praises, one likes to think that worrying, poor, uneven life is not at all; but that really they have entered into a great rest, and the shelter of a mighty friendship which says: "Faithful over a few things, I make thee ruler over many enter into the joy of the Lord." And do you know that we have a foolish and unwise notion, someway, that the Lord's prayer and the sermon on the mount have not been failures. And that the history of the crucifixion has not been bad for the world. That do unto others as you would that they should do unto you, is really a golden rule; that some way, the song of Bethlehem sounding on through these centuries has done something to bring peace and good will among men. A Christian may be a poor creature and James Thomas, all of The Dalles, Oregon.

A Bryanite exchange apologizes for Bryan's garbling of the quotation from Lincoln's inaugural address, in Bryan's speech on Labor day, by saying that "the quotation was perfeetly correct but of course Bryan did not give the whole message." Of course not. But the charge proven against Bryan, without a shadow of peradventure, is not that be did not quote the whole message, but that he disbonestly refrained from quoting enough of the context to show what Lincoln meant. When

Lorenzo Dow took for his text: "Top not come down," in order to make an attack on the way women used to dress their bair in his day. the quotation was "perfectly correct," but he garbled a text that says, "Let him that is on the house top not come down to take anything out of his house," which has no more relation to "top knots" than Bryan's garbled extract had to his demagogic effort to create strife between capital

An exchange declares that "Mr. at Keckuk, Iows, where for simost Bryan should cede the sovereignty thirty years he had lived and labored of his farm at Lincoln, Neb., to in the editorial chair of the Dully Spain or France.
