Such expressions as "The Coat seems to be alright, only the collar doesn't seem to fit;" or "I think the back wrinkles a little." There is where the average clothier "falls down;" he doesn't try to avoid the wrinkles in his clothing; he is neglectful of details. When we sell you a suit of clothes we want your friends to be able to say—

A recent issue of a Dawson paper has an account of the finding of a coin by a couple of miners fourteen feet below the frozen surface of the earth and underneath a five foot layer of solid ice. The coin, according to the account as given, is in almost perfect condition, although all the evidences point to the fact that it has lain there for countless centuries.

A. J. Dufur, while superintending the unloading of chopped feed Tuesday at his barn at Dufur, fell from a plank and sustained a bad fracture of the hip bone. At last accounts he was doing as well as could be expected, but it will be months before he is able to use the injured member.

Do not fail to hear Mrs. Helen D. Harford Friday evening at 7:30 at M. E. church. Mrs. Harford is one of the most pleasing platform speakers of the day. H. C. Gordon left at this office today two apples of the British Columbia variety, one of which weighs eighteen ounces. They were grown on a tree set out three years ago. From the same tree Mr. Gordon filled two boxes of three tiers and sixty apples to a box. They are of a rare variety here, but are very much thought of by the owner.

A vote was polled on a Southern Pacific train recently as a result of a wager between two prominent citizens of Southern Oregon as to the relative number of McKinley and Bryan men on the train. The result was very interesting. It showed that of the 177 voters on the train 116 would vote for McKinley and 61 for Bryan. As many of those on board the train were Oregon people returning from the fair, it is perhaps a fair test of Oregon's political opinion.

The examination of Meade Hughes, who is charged with assault with a deadly weapon, took place today before Justice Brownhill. In the absence of Messrs. Menefee and Wilson at Condon, Senator E. B. Dufur appeared for the state and Ned Gates for the defendant. The result was the binding over of Hughes to appear before the grand jury in the sum of $250. In default of bail, Hughes was remanded to the county jail.

Pell Simison, a stockman from Monument, Gilliam county, had the misfortune to get kicked by a horse yesterday evening which he was unloading from the Dalles City on her arrival here. Mr. Simison had taken a band of horses to Portland and was bringing back a few that he was unable to dispose of to advantage. The animal kicked Mr. Simpson in the abdomen, causing great pain. He was able to walk to Dr. Ferguson's office, where Dr. E. E. Ferguson attended him during the night. This morning he was removed to the Umatilla House. Although his temperature was abnormally high this morning, Dr. Ferguson anticipates no serious results.

The hospital to be erected by Drs. Ferguson will be to all intents and purposes a public hospital as far as the public are concerned. Patients will not be restricted to the treatment of the proprietors, but may employ any physician they choose. The building will be rushed to completion as fast as it is possible to do so under the existing scarcity of carpenters. When completed it will be furnished with the best modern appliances and will be up-to-date in every respect. Dr. E. E. Ferguson is somewhat annoyed at an impression that prevails in some quarters through a mistaken local newspaper paragraph, that the hospital will be a sort of eye and ear infirmary. This is a mistake. Dr. Ferguson makes no pretension of being an eye specialist. If he has a specialty it is that of surgery. At the Rush Medical College, of which he is a graduate, he studied surgery under Dr. N. Senn, whom every medical man in America recognizes as the most accomplished surgeon in the States, if not in a world. Dr. Senn, it may be remembered, was given charge of the field work in Cuba during the late Spanish war. It was only natural that Dr. Senn should inspire his pupil with some of his own zeal for this branch of the profession.

A poor old squaw, who goes by the name of Isabel Joseph, of the Klickitat tribe of Indians, although at present a resident of St. Helens, was found sitting on a sidewalk last night by Mr. Wettle in a most demure condition. She is well nigh an hundred years old and has been visiting relatives in the High Prairie country, Klickitat county, when she was thrown from her pony and sustained a deep gash in the forehead, a severe bruise in the side and a fracture of the wrist. She had come here to procure medical treatment, and, at the time Mr. Wettle found her, was almost exhausted. Her case was reported to the night watchman, and she was furnished lodgings for the night in the city hostelry and had her injuries tenderly attended to by a local physician. Mrs. Joseph is nearing the century mark. She is the mother of three children, all of whom have gone long since to the happy hunting ground. One of them had his throat cut by a St. Helens' white man some years ago and her husband joined the silent majority almost a score of years earlier. She boasts that she was once rich enough to own twenty ponies, which, at about $2.50 a head, must have given her, among her tribe, the social standing of a plutocrat.

OREGON HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Its Rooms in Portland a Place of Intense Interest.

While in Portland last Saturday the editor of this paper spent a short time in the rooms of the Oregon Historical Society on the top floor of the city hall. The visit was a revelation. He had no idea of the hundreds of intensely interesting relics of the discovery and settlement of the Oregon territory that this useful society has gathered together. These relics fill a number of large rooms. Many of them are heirlooms of families that figured in the early history of this country, and date back to periods long antedating the birth of any one now living. Many of them are connected with important crises in Oregon history or with pioneers whose names have become household words in the Far West. They are of every conceivable kind, from a big sea chest, that was in the ship Columbia when the great River of the West was discovered to the first wagon that crossed the plains, the first printing press ever operated west of the Rockies, books and pamphlets and newspapers fifty to one hundred years old, a chair owned by General, then Lieutenant Sheridan; one of the cannon balls that he fired at the Indians at the Cascades in the memorable attack on the block-house in 1856, dutch ovens and pans and spiders and guns and rifles that crossed the plains with the early pioneers, and hundreds of other things each and all having a history, than which the writer can conceive no substantial subject more interesting to an Oregonian.

We write this that others may enjoy a treat that for us was, alas, all too short. We could have spent a week in the rooms and enjoyed every moment of the time. The rooms are free to visitors who are cordially welcomed by the officials in charge. Mr. Himes politely left his desk and spent nearly an hour pointing out the objects of more than ordinary interest and answering questions.

If the reader of these lines is an Oregonian and has never visited the rooms of the Oregon Historical Society he has missed the treat of a lifetime. We shall certainly pay them another visit at the very first opportunity.
