

PEOPLE COMING AND GOING.

Mr. and Mrs. George Peringer, of Pendleton, are visiting the Drs. Ferguson. Miss Ruby Grant left here Saturday to teach a term of school in one of the Tygh Ridge districts. Emerson Williams, the Kingsley merchant, was in town today and left for home this afternoon. A. D. McDonald, a former prominent Sherman county farmer, now of Spokane, was in town today.

The Fossil Journal says Mrs. William Floyd and her daughter, Mrs. Stacey Shown, of Seattle, are visiting Mrs. Wm. G. Keys, daughter of Mrs. Floyd, at Fossil.

BORN.

This morning, Sept. 24th, to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Potts of this city, a daughter, Sagacious Young Shepherd Dog.

I have often read in the Sheep Breeder of the wonderful feats performed by dogs, and venture to tell you of the most remarkable instance of sagacity on the part of a six months old puppy of my own. As I was starting the sheep for home a few evenings since, I sent the dogs down into the gulch for some sheep that lingered behind the flock. Thinking they had brought them all out, and making a new start for home, I was not a little surprised over the absence of a pup, which I finally sought in the gulch, and to my surprise found him in a hole or washout, some six feet square and four feet deep, with about two feet of water in it. In this hole were fifteen lambs, with the pup in their midst. The lambs were struggling for dear life, but were unable to climb the steep and slippery sides of their prison and the puppy doing his best to get them out. But for that active and anxious fellow every lamb would have been drowned. When I had rescued the last lamb the young puppy sprang out of the muddy pool and looked up with a satisfied and triumphant air as much as to say, "Well, master, we saved them!" The puppy was wholly untrained, which makes the feat all the more remarkable.—J. G. Hoyt, Bay Co., Nebraska, in Sheep Breeder.

COURTESY IS THE RULE.

Natives of China Think That Etiquette is the Source of All Virtues.

Courtesy and good feelings prevail more in China among the common people than in any other nation in the world. The people are naturally reserved, earnest and good-natured. Drunkards are not seen on the crowded streets. The children are docile, thoughtful, painstaking and persevering. Commonly speaking, the nation is enslaved to routine and tradition. Passive resistance is more relied upon to overcome difficulties than personal energy and daring. No other nation has fewer warlike songs or more enthusiastic exclamations of peace. The family group is solidified in China as it is nowhere else in the world. Filial piety is the foundation of Chinese society. The "five immutable laws" are the relations of father and children, of king and subjects, of man and wife, of age and youth, of friend and friend. The woman of the nation occupies a position of absolute inferiority to man. After venerating her parents she must venerate her husband. "If I had a bird," says the proverb, "I must fly after him; if a dog, I must follow him to the hunt; if a cloud of earth, I must sit by its side and watch over it." All of the symbolic acts of the betrothed related here that submit a man to the wife for the virtue of virtues. There is a proverb: "The wife must be a mere shadow, a simple echo." One more word of China's inner life. Said Confucius: "All virtues have their source in etiquette."
