

For President—
WILLIAM M'KINLEY, of Ohio.

For Vice-President—
THEODORE ROOSEVELT, of New York.

SORROWS OF THE RICH AND GREAT.

Pity the sorrows of the poor rich and the wretched who are placed in high stations! says the New York Sun. The duchess of Argyll wrote the other day to the emperors, kings, princes, and princesses of Europe, asking them whom they envied in this world of sorrows. The replies which she received are heartrending. One can almost see the stains between the lines, or fancy the sighs and sobs at the end of a period. First comes the Prince of Wales with the following dismal wail: I envy the man to whom it is permitted to be slightly indisposed, without the fact being put in this shape and spread all over the papers of Europe: 'His Highness is seriously ill'—who can breakfast in peace without the announcement in the newspapers 'His Highness ate with a good appetite'—and who can go to the races without finding the next morning in the same papers 'His Highness bet heavily.' In a word, I envy the man who belongs to his family alone, and whose movements are not watched and falsely interpreted."

From the Princess Charles of Denmark comes the following: "When I can take a ride on my bicycle, and afterward devote myself entirely to my own family affairs, I envy nobody. But when I have to be her Royal Highness, I envy everybody." Emperor William II gives this melancholy, but bold reply, poorly calculated to please the sans-patrie: "There is only one man in this world that I do not envy, and that is the rascal who does not love his country."

From Emperor Francis Joseph comes this answer, doubtless written in the tone of a sigh, whatever that may be: "I envy the fate of the fellow who isn't an emperor."

With notes more sustained, assuming for the sake of sympathy that there is music in a sigh, the Czar laments dolefully in this key: "I sincerely envy every man man who is not loaded down with the cares of a great empire, and who has not to weep for the woes of a people."

This is a mighty poor show surely. In the pursuit of happiness, where the mischief are we all at?

WHOLESONE WORDS.

The Universal Leader, a thoroughly non-partisan religious weekly, edited however for many years by men who have been identified with the New England democracy, has the following true and timely remarks on the pending strike of the anthracite coal miners. They are so far removed from the demagogic trash that fill our political papers and is spouted from Bryanite and other platforms that they will bear repetition. The moral of them is, or ought to be, a truism; that while labor has rights that no right-minded man would attempt to deny or curtail, capital also has rights that labor must respect or suffer the consequences of low wages or absolute idleness.

"The striking miners complain that the railroads and the operators tyrannize over them. We are the more inclined to accept their indictment because we notice that the miners, when their turn comes, are not slow to tyrannize over the owners and shippers and over other laborers. The disposition to tyrannize is so universal that it is the part of wisdom to open as few temptations to tyranny as possible. We have often said that we know no religious denomination, not excepting our own, that could be safely entrusted with authority over any other religious denomination. Irresponsible power is a dangerous weapon. When the miners, by their overpowering numbers, feel that they can do what they will, they will do most arbitrary, unjust and tyrannical things. Rights should be acknowledged and guaranteed. It is not safe to have them dependent on the caprice or interest of any person or class."

Catarrrh Cannot Be Cured. with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonic known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrrh. Send for testimonials, free.
