Word was received here today that Rev. Robert Warner, presiding elder of this district, is sick at Lone Rock, Gilliam county, and unable to attend the "Forward Movement" convention that meets here tomorrow.

"A Wise Guy" had a crowded house last night at the Vogt opera house and was generally well received. The specialty work and dancing were exceptionally good. Tonight "Kelly's Kids" will be on the board by another company and an equally large attendance is expected.

A number of farmers about Glenwood are going into the sheep industry. J. H. Hadley and son, Royce, have purchased 300 fine ewes and will winter them on clover hay. William McGrath has bought 300 and will winter them at Mr. Childer's place, near Columbian. Alva and Paul Kuhnhausen have also purchased some sheep.

A victim of the scarlet fever epidemic, who maintained a strict quarantine till all danger of giving the disease to others was over, and who had plenty of time to look up the authorities on this disease, calls our attention to the fact that Webster, in harmony with all the medical authorities in the world, knows no difference between scarlatina and scarlet fever. Webster defines scarlatina as the new Latin for scarlet fever, the French word for which is scarlatine.

Tomorrow at 9 a. m. a district ministerial convention will be held in the M. E. church of this city in the interest of the Twentieth Century Forward Movement of the Methodist Episcopal church. This movement is to obtain the pledge of 100,000 Christians that they will seek to bring ten persons each to Christ during the coming year, and that $20,000, 000 shall be raised for the work of the church. About twenty-five ministers are expected to attend tomorrow's meeting.

At a special meeting of the common council held last night the recorder was instructed to draft an ordinance providing for a rigid enforcement of quarantine against all houses and their occupants where scarlet fever is known to exist. The ordinance will fix a time during which scarlet fever patients must confine themselves within the quarantined premises while convalescing, so as to prevent, if possible, the danger of contagion at the very time when the danger is greatest.

No qualified voter should fail to cast his ballot November 6th. Those who have not registered may vote by securing six freeholders who will make the necessary affidavits as to the voter's qualifications, and the affidavits will be taken without cost at the office of Hudson & Brownhill, where the unregistered voter will also find all the necessary blanks. Affidavits may be taken at any time during office hours, and if left with the judges of election at the polls will be considered as proof of the bearer's qualifications as a voter.

It is said that the editor of an esteemed Bryanite contemporary was complaining at the breakfast table the other morning about the lack of enthusiasm among his party in the present campaign, when the good wife looked up and asked her spouse: "What's the matter with them, any way?" "Apathy," replied the discouraged molder of public opinion; whereupon a bright little son, who was playing near by, anxiously piped up: "Papa, will we have to be vaccinated again?" The editor gazed despondently toward the floor, and an expression of deep gloom overshadowed his face as he replied: "No, my son, it's too late; they've all got it."

Of the farce comedy, "Kelly's Kids," to be played tonight at the Vogt opera house, the Oregonian of October 15th says: "Kelly's Kids," a red-hot farce comedy, opened a week's engagement at the Metropolitan last night to a packed house. During the past week the seating capacity of the theater has been increased by 400, but even this was not enough for the crowd, and the "standing room only" sign went out early in the game. "Kelly's Kids" is a typical farce comedy of the nineteenth century, with the single exception that it is much better than the ordinary run. Of course, there is not plot enough to hurt a child, but clever specialties, good singing and some novel stage effects, combined with plenty of ginger, make the show a good one.

Reformation and mission festival at Zion Lutheran church tomorrow evening at 7:30. Rev. E. Meyer, of Oregon City, will preach on "Missions," and the pastor of the church on the "Lutheran Church." This is the second of a series of sermons on the church of the reformation, and the object of the pastor in delivering these sermons is to acquaint his people better with the origin, strength and growth of the church to which they belong. If you wish to know what the Lutheran church really is, what relation she sustains to other Protestant denominations and what doctrines she holds, attend the services tomorrow night. We cordially invite everyone to come. W. Brenner, pastor.

It will be of interest to a large number of Dalles people who own summer residences at North Beach and Ocean Park to learn that at a recent meeting of the new board of directors of the L. R. & N. Co., held at the headquarters of the company at Ilwaco, preliminary arrangements were made for the booming of the beach for next summer. With the O. R. & N. Co. back of it, the beach will be widely advertised next year and weekly excursions given from points in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and other states on its line at reduced rates. This means improved transportation facilities, cheap fares, and shorter time in making the beach from inland points. Heretofore North Beach has depended principally on Portland for patronage. Under the new order of things it will tap the entire Columbia river basin and other sections beyond it.

In Shakespeare's name lies the key to a wonderful cryptogram. The spelling "Shakespeare" was the poet's nom de plume, while "Shakespere" was his name, an evident change from "Shakespeare." In each of the two spellings last given are ten letters—four vowels and six consonants. Combine these two figures and we have the number 46, the key to the mystery. Turning to the 46th psalm in the revised version, it is found that the psalm is divided into three portions, each one ending with "selah." Remember the number—46. Counting forty-six words from the beginning of the psalm, one reads the word "shake" in the first portion, and counting forty-six words from the end of the psalm one reaches the word "spear." There is "Shakespeare" as plainly as letters can make it.

During the last two or three nights a number of drunken Indians have been making night hideous in the neighborhood of their camp at the head of the old brewery grade. Night before last they kept their drunken orgies up after midnight, and their yells and whoops would have waked the dead had there been any in the neighborhood. At twilight yesterday a drunken buck, frenzied with alcohol, cleaned out the Indian camp and drove the squaws and papooses to the shelter of the rocks. When the drunken savage had spent his fury he returned to camp and fell in the fire, where he lay helpless till pulled out by some of the Indians. Who sells these savages the liquor that makes them a terror? Is there no way of ridding a quiet and respectable community of their presence?

"Uncle Josh Sprucey," the big production which comes to The Dalles for one night, Nov. 2nd, is commented on as follows by the Detroit Daily Tribune: "Honest, homely Uncle Josh Sprucey returned to the Whitney opera house last night, opening the season for that popular play house. Uncle Josh has been here before and has evidently made a host of friends. They were all out to greet him last night, and scores of them stood up during his soiree and were never heard to complain. The character and the play are too well known to need a description. It is the same play with some alterations and additions that go to make it better. The saw mill scene, as of yore, raises the hair of the spectator and its culmination is greeted with a storm of applause. Not to have made the acquaintance of Uncle Josh and the saw mill is to be a long ways from the head of the procession. A feature of the performance is the work of the Uncle Josh Sprucey orchestra, which renders a number of pieces of a high class. There are many familiar names in the cast."

The faithfulness of a dumb brute was never better illustrated than by an incident observed by many people Sunday, says an Olympian paper. Early that morning a man went into Bettman's store and taking off his rubbers bought a new pair. The old ones he threw down near the front door of the store and wore the new ones away. He was accompanied by a handsome water-spaniel that remained at all times near his master. Shortly after the dog and the man left the store the dog came back, having evidently lost his master. Snying the rubbers on the floor the dog stretched himself beside them. When it came time to close the store the dog could not be coaxed away from the rubbers, and it was necessary to put them outside the door to get the spaniel out. This was about noon, and from that time until 7 o'clock yesterday morning the faithful animal lay alongside the rubbers, the cold rain beating upon him. The clerks in the store endeavored to coax the dog away to feed him, but it was useless, he would not leave what he supposed his owner would return for. It is thought when he did leave, it was only when his master came for him.
