All members of Cascade Lodge, No. 303, E. P. O. Elks, are particularly requested to be present at their hall this evening as business of importance will be brought up for discussion.

There are still some reminders of the recent carnival which should be removed at once. We refer to the debris which was raked together at the site of the grounds and is still awaiting the garbage wagon, which cometh not.

A number of the Y. M. C. A. boys met last night and have determined to form a debating and literary society, under the above organization, and have requested the president of the Y. M. C. A. to call a meeting of the board of directors in the near future.

The Sumpter Miner says there are five or six inches of snow at that place, and at the mines near there there have been eighteen inches. Antelope had a snow storm during the early part of this week, but the nearest we come to it was to get a whiff of it in the air.

A tax list is not generally considered a pleasant document to look upon, particularly to those whose names appear thereon, and 'tis usually those who are conspicuous by their absence, that are anxious to view its columns o'er. In other years both the sheriff and the newspaper have been petitioned by many for a copy of the list, and to insure all who desire the list now being published, at the request of the sheriff, THE CHRONICLE today mails a paper to their address.

Never in the history of the office has a more thriving business been carried on in the matrimonial line than is at present going on in the clerk's office, every day witnessing the issuing of at least one license and more often two. Today we find that a license was granted to W. C. Vanderpool and Edith Sawyer, of Dafur.

The dancing season will be opened in a fitting manner next Friday evening when the society young ladies have decided to give a complimentary party to their gentlemen friends at the Baldwin. On that evening the first of a series of club parties was to have been given, but the young men graciously resigned in favor of the ladies.

After five weeks spent in receiving treatment at Good Samaritan hospital in Portland, Miss Elizabeth Schoelling returned home on yesterday afternoon's delayed train, greatly improved and we hope will soon be able to be about our streets again. Miss Schoelling has had a severe siege of four months, and her friends are gratified to hear of her recovery.

We have for sale a neat little home on Thirteenth and Pentland street, consisting of nicely arranged house; good lot, 50x100; small chicken house, yard, etc.; small orchard, city water, and near high school. Parties are going East and will sell for $300 if taken within thirty days. This is a great sacrifice and will go quick. For particulars call on or address Hudson & Brownhill, The Dalles.

Mr. J. P. Lucas left on the midnight train last night for Baker City, whether he bore the remains of his wife for burial, the funeral to take place in that city tomorrow. He was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Sturgill, who arrived here just after Mrs. Lucas' death yesterday morning; a brother, who has been attending school here, and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wilson. At Arlington they will be joined by H. N. Frazier, county clerk of Gilliam county, and Mrs. Frazier, who are intimate friends of Mr. Lucas.

The Midway, which most Dalles people are perfectly familiar with since our recent carnival, it seems is not winter proof, but must needs hibernate during the extreme cold weather, and has taken up winter quarters six miles south of Portland at a small station called Bertha. However, very few of the performers rest during that season and have scattered to various parts of the union, awaiting the time when the active season will begin, which will be on Jan. 1, 1901.

The editor of THE CHRONICLE, Mr. Hugh Gourlay, has for so these many months been wielding his pen in favor of republican principles through the columns of the paper. As the time draws near when the decision is to be made, his enthusiasm has got the best of him and this morning he boarded the boat and this afternoon at Mount Hood precinct and tonight at Pine Grove, in the Hood river valley, will in person tell the people just how it will all happen, and what their part toward that end consists in. He will return tomorrow and resume his duties Monday, speaking on the Washington side of the river Monday night.

The Dalles no doubt has a "kick coming," for she has certainly been slighted by republican speakers during the ensuing campaign. Four years ago we had speakers galore, and good ones too, and lively times ensued. This year the committee no doubt came to the conclusion that their mission was not to call "the righteous, but sinners to repentance," and therefore struck greener fields. By way, however, of making amends for its apparent "snub," we are to have the best of the wine at the end of the feast, and on Monday night will have an opportunity to listen to one of the most logical and popular speakers of the day—Judge George H. Williams.

If any have not sufficient interest in the result of the election next Tuesday or imagines his vote is not worth recording, it might be well to remember that one man saved the honor of Crook county four years ago, that county being carried for McKinley by the vote of a village schoolmaster, Howard Isenberg. Since that time the young man has served his country nobly in the Philippines and upon returning with the volunteers entered upon his previous vocation and was sent by Superintendent Gilbert back to his former school at Cross Keys. A few days since he wrote Mr. Gilbert that Crook county bids fair to again decide for the right side, but this time by a much greater majority than a single vote.

Is it possible after repeated doses of "Si Perkins," "Josh Whitcomb," and like performances, perfectly devoid of a semblance of merit and permeated with a strong flavor of "chestnuts," that the Vogt was crowded with an audience composed of the best people of the city at last night's performance of "Uncle Josh Spruceby," the name of which was a sufficient indicator of what the play would be? Just why such shows (which added to their already meretricious nature, persist in slighting audiences in small places) are always certain of the best houses, while other deserving companies are slighted, is beyond our ken, and yet such, we reluctantly acknowledge, is invariably the case in The Dalles, and in this instance there was positively no room for doubt as to the merit of the play, as everyone was conversant with its nature. Some may, however, censure home newspapers, claiming that notices preceding were flattering. True; but it will always be observed that such comments are taken from other papers and published as advertisements, for which, as in other cases, we do not hold ourselves responsible.

I. N. L. Restaurant Robbed.

Business men on Second street, between Federal and Laughlin, have begun to consider their places of business as a target for all sorts and conditions of burglars, and well they may for almost every week they are called upon to contribute to the fund which keeps these rascals afloat.

Last night the I. N. L. restaurant, kept by John Burgraff, was the scene of a depredation. Upon returning from the theater with his family, Mr. Burgraff was about to unlock the back door when he discovered that someone had kindly left it unlocked for him, and upon going into the front room found that his till had been broken open and $16, most of which was kept in a purse and canvas bag, was missing. The robber, however, deciding not to leave him entirely broke, left $2 in silver in the till. Nothing further had been disturbed in the dining room, but in the kitchen a wire screen had been removed from a side window. What this had been done for could not be discovered as it was evident the fellow had neither entered nor departed by that route. Stranger still, but presumably to cover up the fact that he had a key, the lock on the door had been broken; but in the meantime he overlooked the fact that he had forgotten to again turn the lock on, giving his motive away.

There is little doubt in Mr. Burgraff's mind who his visitor was, and before long he expects to return the call, in company with officers.

It is high time some of these thieves were captured, and to accomplish this it seems evident our officers will not be compelled to go far from The Dalles.

"When Knighthood was in Flower."
"Say, Chimmy, wot's dis, a troop comin'?"

"Naw, youse don't know nothin, dat's a new soap ad."

Two street Arabs with a bundle of evening papers under their arms were standing before a poster on a dead wall in San Francisco. There was a picture of a Hindoo pointing with two fingers of his right hand at two large "O's" near his feet. The fact that there were no words of explanation to the odd design gave rise to the above question and answer, which caused a reporter to pause in the covert hope that a scrap might develop.

"Days nottin' to it, Chimmy, dey's nuttin' to it, see? Youse tink cos your mudder keeps a pig dat youse knows more'n me, see?"

"Say, you'ee, I ain't no pig." Saying which Chimmy smote the larger boy a mighty swat upon the nose, whereupon the larger boy promptly took to his heels leaving Chimmy in undisputed possession of the field. All of which goes to show how little it takes to start a "rough house."

"Hindoo Hoadoo" at the Vogt, Saturday, Nov. 10th.

So great has been the pressure of business at police headquarters the past few days that the officers have scarcely had leisure to which to devour the surplus of mushrooms which the recorder had previously collected. Last night the jail was well filled with drunks, among them Jim Busche, a half-breed, who repentantly promised to touch not, taste not, handle not until New Year's, and was therefore discharged. Others were Lee Gordon and John Keipton, who were fined $5 each this morning; Joe Doe, who was discharged on promise of good behavior, and still there are two or three left in durance vile on account of non-payment of "dues."

When you cannot sleep for coughing, it is hardly necessary that any one should tell you that you need a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to allay the irritation of the throat, and make sleep possible. It is good. Try it. For sale by Blakeley, the druggist.
