

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

There is merit in the claim of each of Oregon's congressmen in their position on the reapportionment bill, says the Salem Statesman. Congressman Tongue, of this district, justifies his opposition to an increase in the number of members by telling this palpable truth:

"The house is now so big it is unwieldy. To make it larger will increase the difficulty. The rules now are such as to suppress the individual and vest enormous power in the speaker. The larger the house the larger the power concentrated in the speaker and the less the individuality of the members. Oregon, with two members, has a larger representation in a house of 357 than one of 386."

On the other hand, Congressman Moody gives a plausible reason for his support of the increased membership, when he says that "the Burleigh bill is a more equitable recognition of the increased population of a large number of states, particularly in the West, and by giving the two neighboring states an additional member each materially strengthens the Pacific coast delegation in the house."

All of which goes to show that there are two sides to nearly all questions, and that honest, intelligent men may differ, while each wishes to do the best thing possible.

According to a Washington gossip, Senator Vest must have about as poor an opinion of the democratic party of the United States in the concrete as Lady Mary Wortley Montagu had of the women of the England of her day in the abstract. The senator is quoted as saying that "there are no good democrats any more," and the way that the democrats in general act reminds him of Lafe Hinton's pack of hunting dogs in Southwestern Missouri. "The last time I was there," he said, "those dogs were no good. They chased rabbits, skunks and other varmints just as if they were game." The senator asked Lafe what was the matter with the dogs, and Lafe answered disgustedly that he "mixed the breeds, and the young ones go chasing after all kinds of fool things, while the old ones sit on the trail and won't hunt any more." And, remarked the senator, "that is the way with the democrats since they began to mix up with the populists."

Of the product of this well-known brewery the United States Health Reports for June 28, 1900, says: "A more superior brew never entered the laboratory of the United States Health reports. It is absolutely devoid of the slightest trace of adulteration, but on the other hand is composed of the best of malt and choicest of hops. Its tonic qualities are of the highest and it can be used with the greatest benefit and satisfaction by old and young. Its use can conscientiously be prescribed by the physicians with the certainty that a better, purer or more wholesome beverage could not possibly be found."
