

IT'S DIFFERENT NOW.

"It will be awfully awful," screech the Corbett organs, "if a senator is not elected before the legislature adjourns." It did not seem that way to the perpetual candidate four years ago, when the hold-up legislature was in session and he appealed to his "dear friend" Senator Driver in these words not to vote to recognize the house as then organized for fear that the result might be the election of a senator:

"I trust you will not vote to recognize the house as at present organized. This favor I can ask as an old friend, and which I trust you will be able to grant. As ever, your old friend, HENRY W. CORBETT."

The practicability of the scheme proposed by the Upper River Transportation Company, that was incorporated in this city a few days ago for putting a line of barges on the Upper Columbia for the transportation of wool to The Dalles, will readily appear when it is remembered that the O. R. & N. Company charges $16 a ton for carrying wool from Wallula to The Dalles, $13 from Arlington and $12.50 from Blalocks. These rates are the same as to Portland and, outrageously high as they seem to be, they are vouched for by Mr. J. M. Russell of The Dalles scouring mills, who is indulging in no flight of imagination when he concludes that the proposed transportation company can make money after cutting these rates in two.

The Oregonian has interviewed twenty-eight Portland business men who, the Oregonian says, were asked this question: "Do the interests of Oregon demand the election of a United States senator by this session of the legislature?" The Oregonian naively says: "It will be observed the question was not framed in the interest of any candidate," yet the answers returned by twelve of the twenty-eight were substantially: "Mr. Corbett is my choice. He ought to be elected." If the question was not framed in the interest of any particular candidate the guileless reporter took good care that the answers should not fail in this respect.

Our Salem Dispatch erred yesterday as to the particular "Davis" that had charge of the Oregon land office when the alleged shortage of some $31,000 is supposed to have taken place. The Davis in question is G. W. Davis, who has been a resident of Marion county for many years. The alleged stealing was done between August 1, 1894, and January 12, 1895, during the time the state land board was composed of Governor Pennoyer, G. W. McBride and Phil Metschan. Pennoyer and McBride went out of office January 14, 1895.

Senator Johnston says Corbett was not his first choice. That is probably the reason why he was so profuse in anti-election promises to vote for another man in case he was elected. But, he says in effect, "I changed my mind when I found the anti-Corbett people would not go into a caucus." That is to say, because certain people refused to walk into an open trap Mr. Johnston feels justified in breaking his word of honor and violating the promises he voluntarily made to his constituents.

Graham Glass should never have published that iron clad obligation that Multnomah candidates for the legislature were required to subscribe before they could count on getting any help from Corbett and his bar'l. Four years ago the Corbett gang were in part justifying the hold-up because, as they alleged, Mitchell's followers had been guilty of the same offense. Of course what was all wrong for Mitchell is all right for Corbett, still the ordinary citizen will insist that it is a poor rule that won't work both ways.

If it is to be Hobson's choice—Corbett or nobody—give us nobody and give it to us a thousand times over. This is the sentiment of the republicans of Wasco county and the CHRONICLE knows it. We shall gain rather than lose by not having another anti-administration senator, and we shall have the satisfaction of getting out of Corbett and his bar'l for ever more.

In its first childhood it probably wanted marbles, tops, and other playthings. In its second childhood it wants a senatorship for a toy, says the Salem Sentinel.
