

The ultimatum, "Corbett or nobody," ended in a fizzle. It was neither.

We move that the name of Henry "Woodpile" Corbett be changed to Dennis.

Mr. Corbett has found out at last that it takes something besides a bar'l to elect a senator in Oregon.

Now that we have got rid of Corbett let us get a good ready to crown the work by getting rid of Simon two years hence.

So the republican majority elected a senator after all, and it was not Mr. Corbett either. On the last ballot Corbett had 27 republican votes to 35 cast for Mitchell.

Oregon will now have a senator whose power and influence for good to the state will not be marred and nullified by his opposition to the policies of the administration.

The election of John H. Mitchell gives greater satisfaction to the people of Wasco county, without respect of party, than would that of any other man whom the legislature could have named.

When a man is accused of seducing the affections of another man's wife he cannot always count on the Oregon legislature prescribing salve for his wounds by electing him to the United States senate.

Just as soon as the news of Mitchell's election was assured a local politician telegraphed congratulations and added the significant reminder, "Please don't forget that I am a candidate for the office of assistant janitor at the state house."

The East Oregonian, to whom riches—in the hands of other folks—is "pisen" and a millionaire always a thief, thinks a $10,000 Carnegie library would look well in Pendleton. The fact that it would be built with money "stolen" from the down-trodden masses cuts no figure.

Senator Mitchell was the logical candidate to be pitted against Ex-Senator Corbett, and his victory over the man who, by an act of the foulest anarchy, wronged him of the senatorship in 1897 is a sample of retributive justice too rarely met with in a world where wrong-doers often fail to get their deserts.

The Oregonian consoles the Corbett push with the following good and comfortable words: "Now at length, we may suppose, it begins to dawn on the minds of the three or four men who supposed last spring they were 'the party' in Multnomah, that some errors were committed—though entreaty, remonstrance, expostulation and argument were then alike unheeded. They thought they had 'a dead clinch.' They had, indeed. And they 'worked' it. The final results, foreseen by intelligent judgment from the first, are now apparent, we may suppose, even to themselves. Look pleasant, gentlemen. At least you can have the satisfaction of seeing admiration of your achievements dancing in the eyes of your opponents, who now will proceed to subsection of the cheese."

Says He Was Tortured.

"I suffered such pain from corns I could hardly walk," writes H. Robinson, Hillsborough, Ills., "but Bucklen's Arnica Salve completely cured them." If the stomach cannot digest enough food to keep the body strong, such a preparation as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure should be used. It digests what you eat and it simply can't help but do you good.
