OREGON FIR-(DOUGLAS SPRUCE)

The following, concerning Oregon's great timber, commonly called red and yellow fir, will prove interesting to many readers. It is taken from the report of the Oregon board of horticulture for 1899, and should be credited to Dr. J. R. Cardwell, a member of that board :

"We have no evergreen trees in Oregon found in the Eastern states or elsewhere, with possibly the ex ception of one variety-Juniperus Communis-the common juniper of Eastern Oregon, about which botan ists differ * * * The most notable of which I wish to speak specially is a new genus, a new variety, single and alone, botanically known as Pseudotsuga Douglasii, as the name indicates, false spruce of Douglas, discovered by a very able and enterlas, who explored and botanized our in California. forests in 1823.

Buried by Intended Victim.

CHICAGO, March 11 .- Funeral services under unusual circumstances were performed when the remains of aged John Correa, the book-keeper who committed their last resting place at Oakwood cemetery.

The unusual feature of the obsequies lay in the fact that the arrangements were made by Mr. Morrill, who, though he is still suffering from a wound in the back of the head inflicted by one of the bullets from a revolver fired by Correa, insists on paying all the expenses of the burial.

Relatives of Correa, however, made known their desire to bury the remains. Mr. Morrill was firm, and insisted that it was his desire to arrange the funeral of the man who for more than twenty years had been in his employ. He retention, though informed of the arrival Falk.
