A QUACK PRESCRIPTION.

The Oregonian argues that the woolmen of the Pacific coast would be vastly benefited if the tariff on Australian wool were reduced to a point where it could be "brought in and mixed with Oregon wool to such advantage as would force shoddy out of the market; the Oregonian's contention being that the cause of the present low price of wool is the largely increased use of shoddy. But this is not the way the woolmen, themselves, view the situation. They know that the present Dingley tariff of 25 cents a pound on shoddy is practically prohibitory, as it was intended to be.

In the late conventions of wool-growers' associations, one of which was held here, it was demonstrated beyond a reasonable doubt that it was a certain kind of long-fiber cotton that was playing the mischief, and samples of this cotton were exhibited alongside samples of fine wool, and only an expert could tell the difference.

The woolmen may not know their own business as well as the Oregonian does, but the idea that Australian wool could be admitted at a rate of duty that would enable it to take the place of shoddy never occurred to them, and never would in a thousand years. What the woolmen ask and all they ask is that manufacturers be compelled to place a mark on every piece of cloth before it leaves the factory, indicating precisely what it is composed of, whether all wool or in whole or in part shoddy or cotton, as the case might be.

The men who know from bitter experience, whatever else they may be ignorant of, that it was during the period of free wool that the use of shoddy in the manufacture of woolen goods made the greatest headway in the United States will be hard to convince that free Australian wool is the remedy for low priced domestic wool and the destruction of the shoddy industry.

The Morgan primary election law, passed by the last legislature, seems as wretched a piece of law-making as it is possible to conceive of. Ostensibly framed to take the people out from under the power of the political boss, its effect would be to place the boss in more absolute control. Think of a provision that requires every candidate for delegate to the county convention to pay a fee of $10 to the county treasurer for the privilege of being a candidate, whether he succeeds or not! The natural result would be that in a large majority of cases the boss would pay the fee and name the delegates and thus, more than ever, control the convention. It is hard to conceive of any better device than this for depriving the rank and file of the voting population of having any voice in the conventions of the political parties to which they belong. Just as well pass a law, and have done with it, that shall provide that the boss who has the longest purse and makes the most liberal use of it shall, of right, name the delegates who shall in turn name all the candidates. True, this absurd law applies primarily to Multnomah county only, or rather to counties having a population of 50,000 or more; but it may be put in force in any other county when it shall be so resolved by the representative authorities of each political party in such county. The best that can be said of it is that there is mighty little danger of such an absurdity ever being adopted in Wasco county.

SALMAGUNDI.

Linn county grangers met last Monday at Albany and organized the Linn county Patrons of Husbandry Co-operative Association, the object of which is to buy and sell in the interest of the members. The association is to be composed of 100 members, with a capital stock of $500, in shares of $5 each.

A string of arc lights has just been swung across Niagara river just below the falls, and the electricity will be turned on five minutes before the night trains arrive, making the scene light as day while the train passes at Falls View station, on the American side. The lights are so brilliant, it is said, that one may read a newspaper at Prospect Park, which is quite a distance from the falls proper.

From east to west Oregon is 370 miles across, and 270 miles across from north to south, giving it an area of 95,000 square miles. The acreage is greater than that of all the New England states, West Virginia and Delaware added, or greater than the aggregate of New York, Pennsylvania and Delaware, or Iowa and Ohio, or Illinois and Louisiana, or of the total area of England, Scotland and Wales.

State Supt. J. H. Ackerman is sending out the school laws to the several county superintendents for distribution among the school officers. Five volumes will be placed in each school district, being one for each director, one for the clerk and one for a desk copy in the school house, to remain there always. Ten thousand copies will be required for this, and every school director, clerk and school house will be supplied with the law.
