Representative M. A. Moody today received word from Washington, D. C., that John Wood, of this city, had been granted a pension of $12 a month, to date from October 4, 1900.

The Hood River Electric Light & Power Company have filed supplemental articles of incorporation increasing their capital stock to $15,000, divided into 600 shares at $25 a share.

Assessor C. L. Schmidt has gone to Oregon City to examine the records of the land office for any lands that may have been recently patented without being reported to the assessor.

Sheriff Kelly today turned over to County Treasurer Hampshire the sum of $5,810.42, the amount received by him for taxes since the delinquent list was placed in his hands on the 11th instant.

So much rice was showered yesterday noon on Mr. J. E. Ditter and his bride, nee Alma Schanno, that Mr. Ditter telegraphed from Portland, on his arrival there, that that commodity had advanced half a cent a pound.

From Jim Brown, of Tygh Valley, we learn that the Bakeoven horse ride will commence on the first day of May, and that the riders will meet on that day at the Fleming place, on Dead Dog. Parties interested will govern themselves accordingly.

Speaking of the Meneley Concert Company, which appears at the M. E. church tomorrow night, the Wasco News says: "The Meneley Concert Company gave a very excellent performance here on Friday night. Everybody should hear these gifted people. Their play was good enough for New York or Frisco."

Six head of thorough bulls arrived at the company's stock yards this morning from Iowa. Three of them were short-horns and were, one each, for Newt Burgess of Antelope, Hon. Robt. Mays of The Dalles, and J. Edwards of the Baldwin Sheep & Land Company of Hay Creek, Crook county. The other three were Galloways and were for H. C. Rooper, of Ridgeway.

Jim Brown, of Tygh Valley, returned here last night from Portland, after disposing of thirty of the thirty-eight head of horses and mules which he and Frank Fleming, of Dead Dog, took there on the 18th of March. Jim is very well satisfied with the prices he got. The animals were in poor condition and were only half broken. They ranged in weight from 900 to 1400 pounds and brought from $50 to $100 a head. Had they been in better condition and better broken, he could have gotten $300 a span for some he sold at $200. A span of mules that stood seventeen hands high and weighed 3,000 pounds brought $400. They were claimed to be the largest span of mules ever seen in Portland, and Jim says he could have realized all he got for them had he put them on exhibition at ten cents admission fee.

We are sorry to learn from Jim Brown, of Tygh Valley, that his partner in the horse shipment to Portland a month ago, Frank Fleming, of Dead Dog, is liable to lose the leg that was broken on the day of the horses' arrival in Portland. It will be remembered that Mr. Fleming's saddle horse fell with him shortly after he had mounted the animal to drive the loose horses from the boat to the feed yard. Mr. Fleming's left leg was broken above the ankle. He was at once taken to the Good Samaritan hospital, where it was supposed he was getting along nicely till three days ago, when one of the attending physicians informed Mr. Brown that he feared Mr. Fleming's leg would have to be amputated. Mr. Fleming, when informed of the physician's decision, vowed he would never allow the member to be cut off, but would die first.

Belgian Hares.

The following is published for the benefit of those who have been experimenting with Belgian hares:

"Mrs. S. E. Hubbell, 1309 W. Congress street, Chicago, recently experimented thus: She bought a spring chicken, weight three pounds. She killed and dressed a hare about four months old that dressed to just three pounds. She cooked them both the same way, fried and put on table side by side to a dinner party of six. All present agreed that the hare meat was cards and spades better than the young spring chicken, being even more juicy, whiter and better flavored. She says that she found out the fact that the three pounds of hare furnished more meat than the three pounds of chicken, as the hare has very small bones. While only about two slices of pure white meat can be had off the breast of the chicken, the hare was all white meat, and the sides of the hare made half a dozen orders of meat an inch thick. The diners other than Mrs. Hubbell were not in the hare business, and their unqualified approval is only in line with the truth of the matter.

"The Irish Duke."

Take a look at the plan of seats at Clarke & Falk's P. O. pharmacy, and then get your seats secured among the elite of the city. There will be a pleasant surprise in store for the people who go to the Vogt opera house tomorrow evening to see the performance by home talent. Persons who were fortunate enough to see the rehearsal last evening were astonished at the professional-like manner they rendered their respective parts, the majority of whom are very young people. Encourage the young artists in such literary pursuits by giving them a rousing audience. Remember the play is to be given tomorrow evening at the Vogt opera house. Reserved seats, 50 cents; children, 25 cents.
