"THE HENRIETTA."

Local Amateur Talent Scored Another Hit Last Night.

A well-filled house greeted the play "Henrietta" last night at the Vogt, and seldom has a company of amateur artists given better satisfaction. The acoustics of the hall were greatly improved by large screens that Mr. Levin had suspended from the ceiling at the back of the hall, so that most of the actors were heard with tolerable ease, unless where they spoke in a low tone or occupied the back of the stage.

Of Mr. Levin, who adds the experience of a veteran to his accomplishments as an artist, it is not necessary to speak.

Earl Sanders' rendition of the unprincipled young scoundrel who was willing to sacrifice his father on the altar of his own ambition, was excellent. Will Evans entered finely into the spirit of "Bertie VanAlstyne," a good-natured, devil-may-care young fellow, whose luck and generosity ran on parallel lines. Claude Frizzell's physical make-up helped out considerably in his representation of "Lord Arthur Trelawney," a light-brained, cane-sucking English snob. Glen Allen represented the Wall street broker with such fine effect that one forgot that he wasn't the real thing. His fine voice made it a pleasure to listen. Waldo Brigham's impersonation of the faithful old secretary and confidential clerk of "Nicholas VanAlstyne" could not have been better. H. E. Northup looked to the manner born as the canting, hypocritical parson who, if he ever had one eye directed towards heaven, never ceased to have the other one steadfastly fixed on the main chance. Charles O'Neil fairly well played the part of the physician.

As "Rose VanAlstyne" Miss Georgia Sampson, who is always a favorite with Dalles people, fully sustained her reputation as a very accomplished amateur artiste. Miss Grace Glenn acted the part of "Bertie VanAlstyne's" sweetheart very becomingly, and Miss Edythe Mans gave an excellent presentation of such a fussy, rollicking light-headed young thing as alone would be capable of forming a life attachment for the cane-sucking Cockney.

One of the very best actors in the entire company was Miss Myrtle Boffe, who assumed the character of Cornelia Opydyke, a vivacious young widow who finally captured the heart of the wealthy old widower, Nicholas Van Alstyne. Miss Boffe's charming physical proportions were in her favor for assuming the character assigned her, but had it been otherwise her unquestioned ability would have surmounted any ordinary difficulty.

The ladies' costumes were both appropriate and beautiful, and the stage setting very handsome and artistic.

It is gratifying to learn that the financial results to the local football team, for whose benefit the play was given, are very satisfactory.

The Chinese quarter had a funeral this afternoon of a defunct celestial, but how old he was or what made him shuffle off this mortal coil are matters beyond the boundary line of Anglo-Saxon information or penetration. If you don't believe it you just try to find out, as this item-stealer has done.

Dorothy, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gibbons, died last night and was buried from the house this afternoon at 5 o'clock. The child was about a month old. It had been ailing for some time and its death was not unexpected.

After the play last night the cast of "The Henrietta" adjourned to Jones', where a light repast was served. Besides the company, there were Misses Prudence Patterson, Belle Haven, Edna Glenn, Harry Bigham and Will Anders. The tables were joined together and tastefully decorated. A pleasant hour was spent.

A. V. R. Snyder, editor of the McMinnville Transcript, has been offered and accepted the position of deputy collector of customs at Wrangle, Alaska. The office was tendered him through Senator Mitchell. Mr. Snyder will leave for his field of labor about May 12th. Some ten or twelve years ago Mr. Snyder was for a time city editor of the Times-Mountaineer.

The Albany Democrat tells the following on the Albany chief of police: "Last night at the revival after calling upon those wanting to go to heaven to stand up, the evangelist remarked that all those desiring to go to hell could go out. The chief of police just then had a message to go somewhere, and hastened out accompanied by his wife. 'That's right,' remarked the evangelist, 'go right on to hell.'"

"During the Prince of Wales' stay in Washington (upon the occasion of his visit to America in 1860) he was President Buchanan's guest, and occupied apartments of the executive mansion looking over Lafayette Square," writes William Perrine in the May Ladies' Home Journal. "One evening when an elaborate display of fireworks was given in his honor he stood on the balcony of the white house, together with Mr. Buchanan and Miss Lane, amidst great cheers. When dining with his hosts he would escort Miss Lane to the table, seating himself at her right. His manner was somewhat bashful, and most public ceremonies apparently bored him. But while he was with Miss Lane and the coterie of beautiful women of her set it was noted that for the first time since he had been in this country he seemed to show the manner of a gallant young gentleman desirous of pleasing. One of the merriest mornings she had with him was at a gymnasium in Washington attached to a female seminary. On the brass rings suspended from the ceiling he swung himself one by one across the room, and the whole party laughed heartily at his pranks on the rope ladder. Then he fell to playing tennis. Miss Lane and the prince together succeeded in conquering Mrs. Thompson and the Duke of Newcastle. It was next the turn of the victors to play against each other, and Harriet, who was one of the most robust girls of the day, speedily outbowed the prince and put his muscle to shame."
