The members of The Dalles Driving Association will meet tonight in the commercial club rooms, for the purpose of taking the initiatory steps towards holding a big celebration in The Dalles on the coming Fourth.
A cocoon made by a single silk-worm contains about 1100 yards of silk. It is an interesting sight to see a worm make its own shroud and retire from the world. Go and see them between 2 and 9 each day. Admission 10 cents.
The Sunday school picnic intended to be held at Lyle June 1st has been postponed to Wednesday, June 5th, and will be held at some more desirable point further down the river. Round trip fare on the boat will be 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children.

A marriage license was issued today to Charles Zigler, of Portland, and Alice Huott, of Eight Mile. The wedding will take place tonight at the residence of the bride's parents, and the marriage ceremony will be performed by Rev. U. F. Hawk, of this city.

Since March 1st, when the tax roll of 1900 came into the sheriff's hands for collection, Mr. Kelly has received over $70,000 of the $103,000 it calls for. Of the total amount collected upwards of $30,000 have been collected since the 16th of the present month.

P. T. Knowles, of Wamic, while in town today assured THE CHRONICLE that during an electric storm of last Saturday a shower of sulphur fell all over the Wamic settlement, and was plainly visible wherever there was a pool of stagnant water. He and others had tasted the stuff and couldn't be mistaken as to its being sulphur.

G. T. Parr and M. Z. Donnell recently returned from a visit to the Horse Heaven country, Yakima county, where they went to look at some lands they recently purchased of the Northern Pacific company. They are greatly pleased with their bargain and only regret that they did not have the luck to own ten times as much.

A large number of our citizens have already been to see the silk worms, which are on exhibition on Second and Washington streets. Daily these little spinners are quitting their companions and searching quiet corners, where they may form their cocoons. You may see them each day from 2 till 9 p. m. at the vacant store back of Raen's grocery.

At 8 o'clock this morning the river gauge at this place indicated 31.1 feet above zero, a rise of 1.7 feet in the previous twenty-four hours. The Daily River Bulletin predicts a further rise at The Dalles to 36.5 feet by tomorrow. It is doubtful, however, if this extent of rise is realized, as the reports from the upper Columbia and Snake river points indicate cooler weather in these regions.

Now that the rate war that has raged on the lower river for over a year is ended, the Telegram suggests that the White Collar Line will possibly place the Bailey Gatzert back on the Astoria run, since the Tahoma is hardly a boat to enter into competition with the steamer Hassalo, T. J. Potter and Lurline, all of which have been repaired and equipped in elaborate fashion to meet the requirements of the seaside travel.

The sheep-herder is a festive institution. One of the craft recently visited Antelope, and, according to the Republican, after imbibing a couple of samples of Antelope's forty-rod lightning and an alleged Antelope lemonade, went out on the street and yelled out that he had snakes. "And to prove his assertion he thrust his hand into the bosom of his shirt and drew forth a fine living specimen of a bull-snake about two feet long. The snake seemed to be greatly attached to the man and would crawl all about his body."

Yesterday afternoon the Bailey Gatzert brought up from Portland an engine and pile-driver for the purpose of driving some piles for a temporary wharf near the boat's present landing. The piles were shipped here by rail yesterday and the force of men appointed to do the work arrived here on the noon train. As soon as the river recedes to a proper stage work on a permanent wharf and incline will be commenced.

Wallace Tuttle, a youth of 18, who hails from Dallas, Polk county, was arrested this morning by Acting Marshal Maheur and lodged in the city jail on the charge of larceny of a watch from the person of a stranger who was far gone in his cups. The theft took place in front of Marder's saloon and was seen by Roy Ballard from A. W. Johnston's store across the street, who reported the theft to Mr. Maheur. The watch was found on Tuttle's person, and his arraignment in the recorder's court will take place this afternoon.

The locks were closed yesterday to navigation and will remain closed till the water subsides. The D. P. & A. N. Company have made all necessary arrangements for the transfer of freight and passengers, and the service of this company's line of boats will continue as usual, with this exception. The Bailey Gatzert was the last boat to go through the locks last evening, on her return trip to Portland. As the White Collar Line has no boat on the middle river, operations by that company on The Dalles-Portland run will be suspended till the locks are again open to navigation.

Acting Marshal Maheur made several arrests today for begging and vagrancy. One fellow, who gave his name as Frank Lee, claimed to be dying of consumption, besides being afflicted with a severe rupture. He distributed a card with the indorsement of G. W. Weber, M. D., Butte, Mont. The fellow looked to be about 25. He appeared to be in a fairly healthy condition. Another husky looking young fellow of 27 or 30 distributed a card asking for help on the ground that he was a cripple. He had a short leg, it is true, but he was otherwise the picture of health and vigor. A third called himself Louis Wilson. He distributed a card on which was printed the claim that he was paralyzed in the right leg, was entirely unable to follow his trade (whatever that was) owing to a serious injury to his head, and was, besides, seriously affected in the spinal cord. This last brother got full of whiskey, and while in this condition was robbed by another hobo. The trio and several others will be rounded up before dark and told to "git."

Mrs. I. D. Francisco, of this city, made a ghastly find yesterday while visiting the graves of her dead in the old city cemetery. Where a recent fire had burned away the long grass and brush Mrs. Francisco came upon a human skull, on each side of which was an old shoe with a bone in it. The lady, suspecting that the skull and bones were those of somebody who had been either murdered there or murdered elsewhere and carried there, beat a hasty retreat and reported the find to Coroner Butte. Dad's recent experience with the "stiff" of a defunct money made him a little wary and he reported the matter to Acting-Marshal Maheur, who made an investigation and arrived at the conclusion that the skull was that of an Indian which recently adorned A. M. Williams & Co.'s elephant sign near the O. R. & N. passenger depot, and that the bones might have been picked up in any old slaughter house and the old shoes in any back yard. It was evident to Mr. Maheur that the aggregation had no relation one thing to the other, and that the several articles were placed in the cemetery as a sort of ghouliah joke.

Terrible Slaughter of Wild Animals.

The following article is taken from an Indiana paper. After reading it the boosier will know as much about Oregon as he does about the mountains back of the moon. If "Mack Perdue" has not already been awarded the gold medal for the champion liar of Jackson county, the presentation should be made at once:

"Mack Perdue, an old Fall Creek township lad and federal soldier, is batching and ranching among the ravines and defiles of the headwaters on the western slope of the Sierra Nevada mountains in Oregon. He has been there for fifteen years, and in a letter to a friend tells how for a long time mountain lions, bears and wolves have raided stock on the cattle ranches in Jackson county. In the letter he says: 'Last week I was engaged by the stockmen to exterminate the animals in a certain section. I secured the aid of about a hundred Klarnath Indians from near Lake Klarnath, and early Saturday morning with Indians and a score of cowboys surrounded the district five miles square in the foothills of the Pitt range and gradually closed toward the center, two hundred dogs in the radeo. As we reached the center of the circle catamounts, black bears, coyotes, and an occasional grizzly bear tried to break through the line, but was met by a shower of bullets. Dozens of animals perished in the attempt to escape, but 200 others were finally cornered in a box canyon, where red skins and cow punchers picked them off from the rocks above. 'There were scores of close conflicts with the enraged and frightened animals, and in one mele four Indians were frightfully mangled by a grizzly before their shots finally finished the bear. One of the reds, Klakashi, a former chief of the tribe, received fatal wounds from the claws of the big fellow. One dog closed in on the victims and dozens of them were killed before the slaughter was complete. 'The final count showed 19 dead mountain lions, five grizzlies, two lynx and over one hundred coyotes—doubtless the biggest round-up of wild animals that ever occurred in Oregon.'"

Endorsed by a Former Schoolmate.

The following handsome compliment to Hon. W. H. Dufur is from the pen of a former Portland schoolmate. It is copied from our Dalles contemporary:

PORTLAND, May 23, 1901.
It has been my good fortune of late to see quite a number of Oregon newspapers speaking well of Mr. W. H. H. Dufur and urging him for the next U. S. marshalship. Kindly permit a fellow who served his kidship with Mr. Dufur to add a word in his favor.

I knew him in school days many years ago, and together we played in the sunny days of youth. We shared our little troubles under the clouds that passed over us until the serious problems of life carried us apart. In all the confidences of schoolmates, in all the years that have passed since, I never knew him to hesitate in the path of duty or stoop to a mean act. Great of heart, broad of mind, true to his friends and himself, he has been a credit to every position he ever filled, and would do honor to this state should he be selected for the high office of U. S. marshal.
