The river gauge at The Dalles this morning registered 35.1, a fall of .9 in twenty-four hours. The daily river bulletin says the river at The Dalles will fall about a foot a day during the next few days.

The enthusiasm with which the pupils of St. Mary's Academy are preparing the entertainment to be given for the benefit of St. Peter's church, on the evening of June 13th, seems a promising proof of its success.

All neighbors of Cedar Circle, No. 6, are requested to meet in Fraternity hall at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon to make arrangements for assisting in the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of deceased neighbor, Paul F. Krefl.

The list of presents given the other day to his customers by Mr. M. T. Nolan the CHRONICLE inadvertently omitted to mention one of $5 cash awarded to J. M. Toomey, of the Columbia hotel, for the largest number of coupons during the month.

Mrs. R. H. Weber, guardian neighbor of Cedar Circle, No. 6, invites all neighbors of Cedar Circle and all visiting neighbor to be present at 8 o'clock tonight in Fraternity hall at a banquet to be given in honor of the visiting grand guardian neighbor, Mrs. Van Orsdall.

Sherman county will be well supplied with grain warehouses this fall. No less than thirty-one—all big ones, too—distributed as follows: Rufus two, Grant two, DesChutes two, Biggs one, Wasco four, Klondike two, Hay Canyon three and a platform, Demoss two, Moro four, Grass Valley three, Bourbon two, Kent two, Wilcox one. Total thirty-one.—Observer.

From August Buchler, who visited Hood River yesterday, we learn that the folks down that way are going to celebrate the Fourth in grand style. A unique feature of the day will be a "log-rolling" contest in the slack water at the mouth of the river. It is intended to induce a large representation from The Dalles by boat, and to have the log contest on the arrival of the boat so that the visitors can view the contest before disembarking. Mr. Buchler has it that an effort will be made to have the D. C. & A. C. band accompany the excursionists and contribute to the pleasure of the day at Hood River.

Evidences have been found of a former great sea around Mt. Ararat. The biblical account of the flood is substantiated. Dr. Frederick G. Wright, professor at Oberlin, tells of his great discovery in a convincing article in McClure's Magazine for June. While traveling in Asia he found geological conditions such as only could be explained by a vast internal submergence of all that region where the scriptures locate the flood. The evidences of the deluge Dr. Wright sets forth very clearly, and his conclusions seem so logical as to admit of no question. The facts as they appear to him, based on the story in the Bible and the geological conditions are very interesting.

Bill Haensit, the Indian whose wife and child were killed near the mess house east of town last Wednesday by being run over by a passing train, was in town today conferring with lawyers as to his chances in an action against the O. R. & N. Company for damages. At last accounts the Indian had met no encouragement. He admitted that his squaw was riding on the track at the time she and the child met their death, but claims that the wagon road alongside the track was flooded and impassible. It appears, however, that whatever road there may be at the place it is only a private one, so that when the squaw took to the track she did so at her own peril.

Jack Coon, who has a homestead on the Columbia river not far from Hood River, sends word to Sheriff Kelly by a Hood River attorney that he refuses to pay some seven or eight dollars taxes against his land, and in doing so is following the advice of United States Inspector, Indian Department, Conson, as well as that of the attorney. The Indian has evidently misled both of these gentlemen so that they have given him advice that if followed will simply increase the taxes by the addition of costs. The attorney says the title to the land is still in the United States government. The attorney is mistaken. Coon filed on the land in April, 1885, and in due time made final proof and received his patent. The land was not taken under the allotment law, and Coon is as free to sell it as if he were a white man and not an Indian. Coon has an absolute title to his land and he exercises, we are told, the franchise at Hood River all the same as a white man. Why, then, should he not pay taxes all the same as his white fellow-citizens?

About Mrs. McKinley.

Mrs. McKinley's life is a lesson of simplicity. Invalidism, which she has borne with cheerful fortitude, deprives her of many pleasures which she would otherwise enjoy.

She was the daughter of James A. Saxton, a prominent banker of Canton, O., and was born in that city. In the public schools there, and later in a private school in Cleveland, she obtained her preliminary education.

Then she attended for three years Brook Hall Seminary in Media, Pa. Six months of travel in Europe completed her education and she returned to her home in Canton, an acknowledged belle.

Her father, a man of practical ideas, said: "She must be trained to earn her own bread if necessary and not to sell herself to matrimony." So Miss Ida Saxton received a place in her father's banking house, and it is said of her that her fair face attracted bouquets and notes to her window.

She had many suitors, but Major McKinley, then a rising young lawyer, was the most highly favored. Her own hand and this acknowledgment from her father: "Major McKinley, you are the only man I have ever known to whom I would entrust my daughter."

They were married on January 25, 1871, in Canton.

It is said that in the early days of their marriage she said that Major McKinley would some day be president of the United States. They went to house-keeping in the home which has since become famous.

Their first child was born on Christmas day, 1872, and was named Kate. She lived to be 3 years old. The second child, named Ida, died in infancy. At about the same time Mrs. McKinley's mother died. The shock brought on a long illness, which left her an invalid. Partial paralysis of one side had resulted, and since then she has walked with difficulty and some times she has been unable to stand.

She was extremely ambitious for her husband. In Washington for many years as the wife of Representative McKinley she was greatly admired. But it is as the wife of the president and the first lady of the land that the deepest interest has attached to her life. She is fond of children and at one time wanted to adopt the little daughter of her seamstress and nurse, of a poor widow. She also desired to adopt Miss Grace McKinley, the orphan daughter of the president's brother, James. She loves music and flowers passionately.

She is denied the delight of reading to any great extent, but is fond of books, and the president spends much time reading aloud to her. She is deft with her fingers, and crocheting is one of her chief pastimes.

Mrs. McKinley was reared a Presbyterian, but became a member of the Methodist church.
At dinners her wine glass is always
