their opponents. The Bloomer girls do not expect to draw crowds entirely on account of the novelty of being female players, but really put up a creditable exhibition of the national game. They travel in a private palace car and carry a canvas fence for enclosing the grounds, a grand stand with a seating capacity of 2,000 and everything necessary to give a first-class exhibition. They have toured all the Western states, and have everywhere received good notices from the press, not only for their good baseball playing, but also for their lady-like behavior.

A Raging, Boaring Flood.
Washed down a telegraph line which Chas. C. Ellis, of Lisbon, Ia., had to repair. "Standing waist deep in icy water," he writes, "gave me a terrible cold and cough. It grew worse daily. Finally the best doctors in Oakland, Neb., Sioux City and Omaha said I had Consumption and could not live. Then I began using Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles." Positively guaranteed for Coughs, Colds and all Throat and Lung troubles by G. C. Blakeley, the druggist. Price 50c. 5

WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Entertainment
At St. Mary's Academy tonight.
Excursion to Hood River tonight.
California apricots and peaches and Royal Ann cherries for sale at the American market. 113-2t
A marriage license was issued this morning to E. L. Boorman and Florence Wheeler, of Hood River valley.
The best green groceries and dressed chickens and the best of everything in that line can always be had at the American Market. 113-2t
Oregon potatoes, that is to say Dalles potatoes, have been in the market about two weeks. They are now retailing at 11 cents a pound.
A force of men in the employ of the Pacific Bridge Company left The Dalles this morning for White river falls, to commence work on the Wasco Warehouse Milling Company's electric power plant.
S. W. Childers, of Columbus, is in the city looking after the sale of this season's clip of 40,000 pounds of wool, which arrived here by rail from Grants this morning, and will probably be disposed of before leaving the cars.
From a letter from Mrs. A. R. Thompson it is learned that her daughter, Miss Lois, underwent a successful, but very critical operation shortly after her arrival at St. Vincent's hospital, and at last accounts was getting along very satisfactorily.
The boat excursion tonight to the strawberry carnival at Hood River ought to be largely attended. The weather this afternoon at this writing forebodes a delightful trip so far as Jupiter Pluvius is concerned, and the boat's officers and crew will do the rest. The Regulator will leave at 8:30 o'clock and return here about 12:30 a. m.
That was a pretty good specimen of an Irish bull perpetrated by Rev. Edward Curran in his baccalaureate address to the graduating class of Fossil public school, when he referred to "the shrieks of the wounded and dying and the groans of the dead." No one but an Irishman could have launched a gem like that without a ghost of a smile.—Fossil Journal.

From Senator T. H. Johnston, of Dufur, who came to town this morning, we learn that a heavy, steady down-pour of rain occurred in the Dufur and Tygh Ridge country Tuesday night and Wednesday morning, lasting for ten consecutive hours, and completely saturating everything outdoors. The indications are the rain extended over a wide territory, and enormous grain crops seem the inevitable result.

The Marion county grand jury is reported as having examined a number of witnesses with a view to obtaining facts looking towards the indictment of Geo. W. Davis for the embezzlement of the state land board. The intention of the district attorney is understood to be to submit the facts obtained to Judge Hamilton for his opinion as to the statute of limitations and if the prosecution is barred the case will be dropped; otherwise an indictment may be presented.

EXCURSION TO HOOD RIVER.

The weather being more favorable today, it has been decided to run the excursion to Hood River tonight. The Regulator will leave at 8:30 p. m. and return at 12:30.
Round trip, including admission to the Street Fair and Strawberry Carnival, 50 cents.
The carnival was a big success last night.

The state grange of Oregon, at its last session, held in Albany, passed a resolution opposing the government's appropriating money for the building of reservoirs and irrigating canals in the arid lands of the West. This is about what could be expected of the state grange of Oregon, comments the Shaniko Leader, as all there is of it is in the Willamette valley, where it rains almost thirteen months in the year, and a portion of that time they have to hunt around for their wells with a pole.

The remains of Richard Dumontier, the young man who lost his life through injuries received in a railroad collision at Mosier last week, were, by orders received from his mother, disinterred from the potter's field this morning and shipped by express to Seattle. The boy's father left a couple of weeks ago for Alaska, and is not yet aware of his son's death. The bereaved mother writes that her boy met his death on the first trip he ever made away from home.

Messrs. B. F. Laughlin, Jud Fish and T. J. Seufert have gone to Baker county in response to a letter received from the superintendent of the Golden Eagle mine notifying the stock-holders that he had struck the main ledge he had been tunneling after for some weeks and had found it rich beyond expectation. Three sacks of ore had been taken from the ledge that the superintendent estimated to be worth a dollar a pound. At this rate the ore would be worth between two and three thousand dollars a ton.

Homer D. Angel returned to The Dalles yesterday from New York, where he passed a term in the law school of the Columbia University. On arriving here a letter awaited him from the secretary of the council of the university announcing that on the 12th instant the degree of M. A. had been conferred on him for proficiency in political science, a branch of study that he had taken outside his regular law studies. This is justly considered a peculiar mark of honor to Mr. Angel, as only one other first year student was so distinguished.

A Delightful Party.

Mrs. F. T. Sampson and Mrs. E. M. Williams gave a party Tuesday afternoon for Mrs. Sampson's two little daughters, Margaret and Francis, which proved to be a very delightful affair.
The older ones played "Anagrams." The word "nasturtium" was used, and Miss Erma Dawson carried home the first prize and little Dorothy Bailey the second.
The smaller tots played a game that consisted of carrying eight peanuts at a time on a silver knife, from hall to dining-room. Fannie Puriman succeeded in carrying the most and obtained the prize.

After the games a most delicious lunch was served.

A great many of the young ladies' little friends were invited but all were not able to be present. Those present were: The little Misses Edna Russell, Rita Farley, Myrtle Rorden, Maude Kirby, Veva Vause, May Waiters, Geraldine Kelly, Laura Kurtz, Celia Gavin, Genevieve Fish, Helen and Grace Peters, Margaret and Gearson Wheelon, Irene Poling, Eva and Fannie Puriman, Dorothy B.iley, Wilma Donnell, Jessie Hostetter, Genevieve Nielsen, Hattie Longmeier, Lulu Fraser, Margaret Tooley and sister, Norma Dietzel, Retta Taylor, V'ona Guthrie, Carmel Bolton, Erma and Nova Dawson, Mildred Markillie.

A Snow Storm in June.

Snow began to fall at midnight Tuesday, and by 7 o'clock on Wednesday morning it measured five inches on the level. It continued snowing until about noon, when a rain set in, which still continues. At Ridgeway, about twelve miles west of us, snow is ten inches deep, and the early hay, that was ready to give way to the reapers, is now lying flat on the ground. At Antelope, six miles south, only about two inches of snow was on the ground, while on the hills surrounding the town it is said the snow was twelve inches deep.—Shaniko Leader.

Lost—A gold fob chain, with locket attached, containing a child's picture. The finder will be suitably rewarded by leaving it at the office of Dr. Sanders. 10jun-4t

WANTED A BRIDE.

A Hood River Rancher Makes a Novel Proposal.

Romance has come into the life of Julia Torppia, spinster, in a most unexpected manner, says the Astorian. Julia is blue-eyed, blonde and dimpled. Incidentally she looks after the culinary troubles in the home of J. T. Ross, of the firm of Ross, Higgins & Co. She is a plump little maid from the land of the Vikings who knows more of the language of cupid than of the twisted and tangled mazes of Idiomatic English.

But to the romance in question. Somewhere in the Hood River district, presumably in a lonely spot, dwells a bachelor, whose soul yearns for an affinity. Between yearnings he is occupied with the more prosaic task of cultivating strawberries for the Astoria market. His name is G. A. Shirton, and according to his own statement he has a good home, and he is authority for the additional information that he is willing to share it with a suitable mate.

Opportunities for courtship apparently are rare in the Hood river country, so Mr. Shirton decided on a novel manner. In a box of luscious berries, the finest in the crate, he placed a note. And that note, though brief as to length, recited that he was tired of single blessedness and that his little dove cote needed a mate to make life that "grand sweet song" that one Grover Cleveland, democrat, pictured married life. He reasoned with bachelor astuteness that it would be a good housekeeper that would secure the finest berries, and he wanted such a one.

Alas for his plans. The berries were sent to Mr. Ross's home and the plump, dimpled Julia proceeded to hull them. In the bottom was a leaf torn from an old account book. Now Julia has barely a speaking acquaintance with the English language and it was necessary to have the contents translated. When it was made clear to her that he wanted a life companion Julia did what any other woman would have done under the circumstances—she blushed. Her dimples deepened and the blood came and went in her rosy cheeks as she murmured something in her native tongue, which was probably synonymous with that time-honored "This is so sudden."

But Mr. Shirton's hopes are in vain. Julia will not have him. She has other matrimonial plans and they do not fit in with the strawberry ranch on Hood river. No answer was returned to the proposal and if this comes under the notice of Mr. Shirton he will understand that he is refused once and for all—by Julia. But there are other maids, and affinities are plentiful.

The Boston Bloomers.

The Boston Bloomers, champion lady baseball players of the world, will arrive here Tuesday, June 18th, and give an exhibition on the old fair grounds at 2:30 p. m., the Dalles local club being
