GROSVENOR ON TARIFF TINKERING.

The following vigorous and comprehensive presentment of the question of tariff tinkering is from the pen of General Grosvenor, the Ohio congressman, who has been said to be in a peculiar sense the reflector of the views of President McKinley on the floor of the house of representatives. It is in response to a request by the American Protective Tariff League for an expression regarding the reopening of the tariff question, either by direct legislation on the subject or by the more round-about method of special treaties framed for the benefit of a few industries and at the expense of the general body of industries, General Grosvenor says:

"The great danger to the future welfare of the American people lies in the shortness of their memory. Two things have made this country prosperous and rich, and are moving forward with enormous strides toward making us the richest country on earth. Those two things are, first, the Dingley tariff law, and, second, the confidence which up to a recent period the American people had that we were to have steadfast adherence to the status quo, that it was to be maintained, and that disturbers of the peace and prosperity of the country were to be relegated to the rear. The demand for tariff reform, tariff revision, tariff anything whatever other than what we have now, comes altogether from two classes of people. First, the free trader, in all his forms, semblances and phases, and, second, the man who, stampeded about trusts and combinations, has been carried off his feet by the cry of the tariff reformer that we ought to repeal the tariff on certain products in order to break up the trusts. It is a small matter to get up on an elevation where there is a reservoir of water and bore a gimlet hole through the structure and let a stream of water the size of a straw project itself out upon the city below; but when it is entirely apparent that there is that sort of a gimlet hole which will become an auger hole, and finally a breach in the wall, and that the flood will come down on the town, then the old Bible illustration becomes forcible, 'It is the beginning of strife.'

"Admitting that the repeal of the duties upon certain products of American industry might injure and even destroy certain of the trusts, agitation of the question of the modification of the present tariff system would do more financial injury to the welfare of the country in one month than all the benefits that the most enthusiastic rainbow chaser of the suggestion has ever dreamed of. Let a party with political power enough solemnly decide that they will enter upon the reorganization of the schedules of the present tariff law and business will stop as quickly as human life will stop when the blood ceases to circulate. By 'stop' I do not mean to cease absolutely, but the heart will beat more slowly, and the blood will flow in paucity of amount and speed.

"I do not believe that the placing of our products of iron and steel upon the free list would break up a single trust or impair the value of the stock of the United States Steel Company or any other of the combinations. I do not believe that it would wipe out the small manufacturers, and that the great combination would control absolutely the markets of the United States in company with and upon a basis of division of profits with the trusts now organized abroad. I do not care to discuss this subject now. I believe the whole matter to be an inspiration of the devil of free trade, and it has been seized upon because of the supposed anxiety of the people to break down trusts and combinations, but my point is that a present agitation of a serious character, backed by force enough to make it effective for a general revision of the tariff laws would be absolutely destructive of the present prosperity.

"There is no trouble about the trusts. Under our constitution, as at present formed, congress, in cooperation with the state legislatures, has ample power to do all that is necessary, all that is just, all that is fair, in the regulation of combinations of money, capital and labor."

NOLAN'S Profit-Sharing Association.

The first monthly dividend has been distributed to the profitable satisfaction of thirteen of my customers. The only regret is that I was not able to give a valuable present to each of my customers. I think they all deserve one.

On Saturday, July 6th, I will give away two music boxes—one worth $27.50, playing eight tunes, and one worth $7.50; a sack of sugar and a barrel of flour. I will give a cash rebate of $3.00 to customer paying the most money by that date, and $2.00 to the one paying in the second largest amount. On each Saturday, commencing on the 15th of June and including July 6th, I will, in addition to the two presents given each week, give a $1.00 rebate to the customer paying the largest amount during the week.

Purchasers of goods in my line will do well to keep in mind that I sell goods as low as the lowest, as well as share the profit with my customers.
