GREAT FLOOD AT KEYSTONE

Many Persons are Drowned in Plain Sight of Their Friends—Majority of Population Sought Safety on the Mountain.

KEYSTONE, W. Va., June 25.—The following story is told by an eye-witness to the great flood:

Keystone is the metropolis of the Elkhorn mining country. It has but one narrow street, and because of limited space many houses are built on piles or walls over the Elkhorn or close up against the mountains. The town follows the meanderings of the stream for a mile. Friday night at 11 o'clock the storm struck the mountain, and for six hours rain fell in torrents. Houses, barns, bridges, fills, livestock and human beings were swept away by the mighty current and dashed on the rocks or trees below.

"I was stopping at a hotel. At the first warning many of the inhabitants took refuge on the mountain side overlooking the town and river. More than 100 people, however, remained in town to look after the women and children who did not escape early. The bridge leading to the depot was soon swept away, and then the angry waters rushed through the only street in the town, and we found hundreds cut off from the mountain retreat. The hotel was made fast to the telephone poles by means of a line. Hundreds of lives were saved. But in attempting to cross the muddy, surging waters which swept like an avalanche down this street many lost their hold, and in plain sight of friends were carried out into the river and drowned. Horses plunged and danced in the mighty stream with screaming women and children on the roofs. Horses, cattle and other animals were drowned around us.

The Norfolk & Western Railroad fill at this place gave way, and more than a mile of track now lies in the bed of the river. In fact, it is hard to tell how many miles of track and how many bridges have been swept away. The destruction is tremendous to the railroad alone, and it may be many days and perhaps weeks before trains can run.

"The loss of life cannot be estimated from here. It is known that eight lives were lost here. Six bodies have been recovered at Eckmag, two miles below here. Several were drowned at Swawnee and a good part of the town swept away.

"All the women were conveyed from the hotel to the mountain side by means of the life line. Then the men left, as the place was unsafe. When it came my turn I seized the line and plunged into the muddy current. In an instant my feet were swept from under me, and it was the flight of my life to reach the house on the south side of the street. The distance was not great and the water not more than three feet deep, but the current was almost irresistible, and even cows and horses were swept past me as I clung to the rope, which was the only hope. Friendly hands pulled me out mere dead than alive. The hotel is still standing."

MINERS' LAW IN KLONDIKE

Married Woman Shoots Down the Man Who Betrayed Her—Husband Stood by and Encouraged Her to the Deed—Woman Not Molested For Her Act.

SEATTLE, June 25.—The following story is from the Dawson Daily News of June 7th:

Dick Beales was shot to death by Mrs. Thomas Herndon near this city, while the woman's husband stood by and prayed that her hand would not fail at the trigger. Herndon had been searching for his wife for the last three years. A chance clew led him into the Klondike region last winter, and near Dawson, Herndon found his wife, deserted and suffering. She had been persuaded by

A BLOODY BATTLE FOUGHT

A Seattle Gambler Shoots and Kills Ex-Chief of Police W. L. Meredith.

SEATTLE, Wash., June 25.—At 5:25 this afternoon John W. Considine, one of the proprietors of the Standard Gambling House and People's Theatre in this city, shot and killed ex-Chief of Police W. L. Meredith. The shooting occurred in Guy's drug store, on the corner of Second Avenue and Yeiser Way, in the heart of the city. Considine was also wounded slightly in the head, by a ball from a double-barrelled shot-gun in Meredith's hands.

The stories of the shooting are conflicting, and it cannot yet be said who was the aggressor. The men had threatened to shoot one another on sight, and both were prepared for trouble. The drug store at the time of the shooting was crowded with people, and one bystander was shot through the arm by a stray bullet. Meredith was killed while struggling with John Considine and Tom Considine, who had come to his brother's aid.

Three bullets from Considine's revolver, fired at short range, pierced Meredith's body—one in the head, another in the chest and another in the abdomen. Considine was at once arrested by Sheriff Cuddehe and two police officers who were in the drug store when the fatal shots were fired. He was taken to police headquarters, and from there transferred to the county jail in a closed carriage, to avert lynching, of which there was some talk in the great crowd which gathered about the scene of the shooting.

Considine and Meredith had been mortal enemies for about three years, although they were prior to that time warm personal friends and associated together in the theatrical business of Spokane. Meredith, who resigned his office last Saturday on account of the pressure brought to bear upon him by Mayor Humes, was city detective before made chief. While in the subordinate position he and Considine never spoke but avoided open battle. After Meredith was made chief, however, he served notice on Considine that the latter could not remain in the city and do business, and followed up the threat by making several police orders which affected Considine's business. In retaliation Considine publicly made charges of corruption in office against Meredith, and reiterated them until the Law and Order League took the matter up and called for a council investigation of the police department. The council committee investigated, and last Friday night made a report to Mayor Humes advising the removal of Meredith and one of his detectives, C. W. Wapenstein. Mayor Humes therefore requested Meredith's resignation.

Strikes a Rich Find.

"I was troubled for several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H., "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all the medicines I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. Dick Beales that Herndon was dead and had married Beales.

After confessing his duplicity to the woman he had wronged, Beales, fired with whisky, went to the cabin of his partner, Jeff Alexander, and demanded his share of the clean-up. Alexander tried to argue with the liquor crazed man and refused to give him anything until he was sober. Beales drew his revolver and shot his partner. Alexander fell to the floor and the would-be murderer seized the gold dust in the cabin and started for town.

Beales took possession of the dog team loaded with provisions and started off, followed by several parties of men who had discovered Alexander wounded in his cabin. The first of the parties, headed by a man named Andrews, was overtaken at Anvil by Herndon and his wife, who too were in pursuit. Andrews had broken his leg and the outfit had stopped. Leaving Andrews at Anvil the remainder of his party, with Mr. and Mrs. Herndon started on the trail again.

After a long chase the party overtook Beales near McKeon's cabin on Anvil. Beales stood at bay and whipped out his revolver. Herndon also drew his gun and the two men exchanged shots. Beales was hit in the leg but continued firing. Herndon had dropped his revolver after the first shot. Mrs. Herndon grabbed the still smoking weapon and fired three shots at Beales, who fell dead. The body was left in the trail and the party returned to Anvil, from which place Mr. and Mrs. Herndon took the route to St. Michael. None cared to stop them. There was no need of other than miners' law in that country.
