SALMAGUNDI.

With all the oil blow in Oregon there is as yet not a single flowing well in the whole state, nothing but seepages, and you can find a seepage in almost any old place.

"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully," she wrote to the patent medicine house. "Three weeks ago I could not spank the baby and now I am able to thrash my husband. God bless you!"

The Astoria papers say the run of fish is good these days and if it continues to improve this year's pack will surpass that of last year, notwithstanding the very poor supply during the first part of the season.

A Portland woman prayed long and earnestly for her husband, and finally asked her pastor what she could do to induce him to stay home at nights. He advised adding to his home comforts something that he enjoyed away from home. The next day the wife was inquiring the price of beer by the keg.

On the base of the statue of Mr. Gladstone erected in the University square of Athens, Greece, a quatrain is engraved, of which the following is a translation: "To a part of Epirus and to Theesaly thou gavest the sacred light of freedom, averting slavery; Hellas, mindful of this boon, has raised this statue to thee, Gladstone, whose glory is immortal."

Charles H. LaBelle, a Salt Lake architect, will be worth $5,000,000 within sixty days from date, with a good chance of getting $5,000,000 more according to his story. He claims to have invented a process by which he can extract rubber from the ordinary crude oil as it is found in Utah, and produce rubber pulp at a cost of one-fourth of a cent a pound, while the rubber as it comes from the tree in Brazil costs $1 per pound. Mr. LaBelle states that a syndicate of California, New York and London capitalists has taken an option on his formula, and has deposited $105,000 in a Salt Lake bank to hold the option till the deal is closed.

Sells and Gray's Big Circus.

This is what the Topeka Daily Journal of June 14th, said of the performances of Sells and Gray's United Shows, which are to be duplicated in The Dalles on Saturday, July 20th. "The big tents were literally packed with people, and it may be said, to start with, that everybody was delighted with the performance. There were new and novel features that caught the crowd immediately. A band concert preceded the performance in the big tent, which was a big treat for music lovers. The ring performance introduced the Earl Sisters in thrilling aerial feats; the Tybells in evolutions on the lofty ladder; the six Eddy's whose acrobatic features were wonderful; Miss Edna, a beautiful and daring performer, and many others famous in the ring, not to speak of the clowns, who kept the people in a roar of laughter from the opening tournament to the hippodrome races. Altogether the performance is a kaleidoscope of marvelous feats and funny acts, and beyond doubt is one of the best ever seen in this city."

This coming from such a reputable paper as the Topeka Journal assures the people of the excellence of Sells & Gray's show, and their tents will certainly be packed at the two performances in The Dalles, Saturday, July 20th.

A. Brooks, who is bound over to the grand jury for robbery of clothing and a watch from the I. X. L. restaurant, and George Baker, who is serving out a hundred-dollar fine for selling whiskey to Indians, made this noon what proved to be a very futile attempt to break jail. Using a broken stove-hd handle they pried out some brick from the side of the window of the jail day-room, and while the sheriff and his deputies were absent at the noon hour the prisoners started in to saw off the iron bars of the window. But they reckoned without their host, for Jailor Fitzgerald had already spotted the removed bricks and, without letting the prisoners know of his discovery, awaited further developments. Just as the men had succeeded in sawing an inch iron bar half way through, the jailor broke in upon them and chucked them into a cell, where they will probably have abundant time to repent of their ill-advised attempt to get out of jail before their time.

A mass meeting of the business men of the city is called for Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the club rooms to devise ways and means for holding a street fair and carnival this coming fall and to make suitable provision for entertaining the Second Oregon District fair. As these projects mean much to The Dalles, every man who has business interests in the city is expected to make it his duty to be present at this meeting and contribute by every means in his power to its success. No celebration was held here on the Fourth in order that the funds requisite for that purpose might be spent on the fair and carnival. Last year's fair was a big thing for The Dalles. Let us have one this year that will beat it two to one. We can do it if we only try. The doors of the club room will be unlocked Wednesday night and everybody will be welcome.

In the case of the death of Medford A. Moore, at Prineville, last Tuesday a most intelligent jury was unable to determine whether he came to his death intentionally or accidentally. The jury found that Mr. Moore "came to his death on the 9th day of July in the city of Prineville, from a gunshot wound inflicted by his own hand, whether intentionally or accidentally we are unable to determine." The shot that ended Mr. Moore's life was fired from a rifle that Mr. Moore had recently acquired. The Crook County Journal says: "At the time of the occurrence no one was in the store. He was found sitting in an office chair back of the partition that is placed across the store between the stationery and candy department and the bowling alley and must have been leaning over the gun when it was discharged, as the ball came out lower than where it entered. The ball entered a trifle below the left nipple and passed directly through the heart."

THE CHRONICLE man spent an hour today trying to get the sentiment of some of the leading business men as to the advisability of the council's entering into a contract for lighting the city. For obvious reasons THE CHRONICLE avoided asking the opinion of men who are financially interested in the matter. The broad question: "Are you in favor of having the city lighted by electricity?" without any thought or consideration as to who should get the contract, was put in each case; supplemented by the suggestion that the lighting of the city might mean increased taxation, or at the best a lessened annual amount for the sinking fund. The answers, with one exception, were the same. One business man, who asked that his name be suppressed, said he was opposed to the expense. He thought we had got along very well without lights in the past and could get along very well without them in the future. The rest were unanimously in favor of lights. Some said they were willing to pay their just proportion of increased tax, if necessary, and a majority qualified their approval by insisting as an essential condition that the city must not, under any circumstances, go in debt for lights or anything else. The substance of the answer of this majority is: "We want the lights, by all means, if the city can afford them." This is substantially the opinion and answer of Mays & Crowe, Pease & Mays, A. M. Williams & Co., Hugh Glenn, G. C. Blakeley, J. T. Peters & Co., August Buchler, Surad & Pearlman, John S. Schenck, Nathan Harrie, Prinz & Nitschke, Sinnott & Fish, Henry Herbring, Frank Gunning, Emilie Schanno, George Ruch and Sexton & Wa'her.
