NO "ANTI-AMERICAN LEAGUE."

Vienna, the great experiment station of European politics, discloses by way of Paris that there are some insuperable obstacles to the formation of a European customs league against the United States, says the New York Tribune. The identity of the obstacles is not disclosed. Imagination will not, however, be overwrought in speculating upon them. There are some strings which are pretty easily guessed.

A sufficient bar against any such league might be found in the fact that scarcely any two European countries are agreed between themselves upon the tariff. Commercial wars are endemic throughout the continent. It is not to be supposed, for example, that Germany and Russia or France and Italy would wholly sink their mutual rivalries and industrial animosities. Yet without that no effective anti-American league would be possible. Moreover, was it the expectation that Free Trade Great Britain would become protectionist, or that the protectionist continent would go over to free trade? For surely there must be some such uniformity to make concerted action effective.

But before and above such considerations rises the one great fact that the two greatest commercial and industrial countries of Europe were not and are not by any means to be led into such a movement. It needs only a little careful thought to convince one that it is simply inconceivable that either Great Britain or Germany should enter upon anything resembling a tariff war with the United States. And "Hamlet with Hamlet left out" would be scarcely a marker in helpless and hopeless incompleteness by the side of a European commercial league against America with those two left out.

"Dunn's Review" reckons that the cost of living since McKinley took the reins of government has increased 30 per cent, but pertinently asks: "What sane man would question the ability of the people to pay a third more now? Does it matter to the peniless man, out of work and discouraged, whether food for his family is 10 cents instead of 12? Four years ago the army unemployed was so great that philanthropists could not provide soup houses enough to prevent deaths from starvation. This is not such ancient history that any one can have forgotten. Prices were low then because there was little demand. Demand was light because idle men had no money with which to purchase. At present labor is so well employed and well paid that controversies are not for higher wages, but for recognition of the various labor organizations. When thousands of men can afford to quit work in order to insist on technical points of this kind it does not appear that they are finding the increased cost of living burdensome.

NOTICE TO THE PEOPLE
which will be for their own benefit if needed.

Before buying any tombstones or any cemetery work come and see Mr. Comini. Don't let any one bind you with their slick talk. They know nothing about the business and run down the poor mechanics. They try to make you believe that their work is durable. Before you give your order let Mr. Comini take you out to the cemetery and show you what kind of work he puts up and give you his prices for similar work. Don't be in a hurry to give your order, but first give Mr. Comini a chance to figure on your work. You will find by asking any one who has had business dealings with Mr. Comini that all of his work is of first-class quality, just as he represents it to be, and that his prices for such work are very low.

It is not necessary to send for stone from other places, there is stone here in The Dalles that will stand until the judgment day. Sandstone crumbles, June 12-dawn!
