The Diamond Flouring Mills.

To one whose knowledge of flour manufacturing is limited to a very rudimentary conception of the old burr mill and boiler of fifty years ago the operation of a strictly up-to-date roller process mill is as bewildering as that of a modern Hoe perfecting printing press is to one whose knowledge of printing is limited to the operation of an old-style Washington hand press. He sees an endless lot of shafts, pulleys and elevators and odd-looking machines, concerning whose particular use he has no more idea than the man in the moon. At least that is the way it was with the CHRONICLE man when, at the invitation of Mr. Groat, the head miller of the Diamond Flouring mills, he took a look the other day over that establishment. Thanks, however, to the courtesy of Mr. Groat, who answered our numerous kindergarten questions with great patience, the newspaper man came away from the place deeply impressed with a sense of the marvelous revolution that human invention has effected for the production of the most necessary and staple of all our food products from the crude process of a generation ago.

Notwithstanding that the machinery in these mills could hardly be called old, and that with it a reputation has been established and maintained for the best flour in the Pacific Northwest, the old machinery has been set aside and an entirely new bolting system installed. Ten reels or bolters, as the layman would probably call them, have been replaced by two Universal bolters, immense big cylindrical things like monster drums that sit on end chock full of an endless number and variety of sieves and, instead of revolving like the old-style bolters, have a motion when in operation similar in principle to that of the hand sieve or riddle of early days.

But the one thing that interested the newspaper man most was the purifying machinery. Your old burr mill was run on the principle that every man must eat his peck of dust. The modern mill is constructed on the principle that if dust must be eaten it shall not be eaten with flour. Four big metal cylinders tapering towards the bottom end, and called Cyclone Dust Collectors, because their inwards are said to be constructed on the spiral principle of a cyclone, receive the wheat from the bins, as it passes to the rollers, with a current of air strong enough to drive off every particle of loose dust. But the purification does not end here. When the wheat is in a half ground condition it passes over sieves through which is driven, by a powerful fan, another strong current of air that separates any dust or impurity that may have escaped the Cyclone Dust Collectors. The result of these processes of purification is that the flour is always as free and pure from dust or other impurity as it is possible for human skill and labor to make it. The result too is apparent everywhere throughout the mills whose floors are as clean and free of dust as any ordinary well-kept kitchen.

The new machinery increases the capacity of the mill about 25 barrels a day above what it was before. Two grades of flour are now produced instead of one as heretofore, the second quality as good as the first of any mill within 500 miles of here, and the first quality equal to the best flour on the American continent. If you think this is putting it too strong we ask you to remember the murmurs and complaints of The Dalles housewives during the past two months when the Diamond mills were shut down and the family cook couldn't get Diamond flour.

TREASURER'S NOTICE.

All Wasco County warrants registered prior to September 2, 1898, will be paid on presentation at my office. Interest ceases after July 12, 1901.

JOHN F. HAMPSHIRE, County Treasurer.

WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Ad Keller is confined to his room with sickness.

P. D. Hinrichs writes the Weather Bureau that fruit is not so plentiful in the Hood River valley as it was a year ago. Still, he adds, there will be many prunes and pears.

Now is the time for low shoes, and in preparing for an outing don't forget that A. M. Williams & Co. will be selling their regular $5 patent leather Oxfords, on Saturday, at $4.15.

The Bailey Gatzert stops at the following landings: Hood River, White Salmon, St. Martin's Springs, Cascade Locks and Vancouver. Arrives at The Dalles at 3 p. m.; leaves for Portland at 4 p. m., arrive at Portland 10 p. m. Daily except Monday.

The wool market in The Dalles is practically over and before another week is ended all outside buyers will have left for other parts. A few clips remain in the warehouses unsold, but these are for the most part of inferior grades and may have to be held over if not sold at what the owners would probably consider a sacrifice.

The White Collar line, Bailey Gatzert, will sell through road-trip tickets to Seaside and return. Tickets good going from Portland over the White Collar line, O. R. & N. Co., V. T. Co. or the A. & C. R. R., and return over same lines. Baggage checked direct to either North Beach, Seaview, Long Beach, Breakers, Ocean Park or Nahcotta. Limit of ticket September 15th. J. M. Filloon, agent.

Yung Hing, the Chinaman who was cut in the back and arm last week by another Chinaman named Wang Foh, left town as soon as his assailant was arrested and he was able to get out of bed. Foh is still in jail but as his victim is never likely to come back he will have to be discharged. Which reminds us that for ways that are dark and tricks that are vain the heathen Chinese is peculiar.

The Reliance met with an accident on her down trip yesterday, at the Cascade

Locks, which compelled a change of program in the run of the other boats. The Regulator arrived here at 7:30 this morning and left for Portland half an hour later; hence she did not make her daily down trip this afternoon. The Dalles City will arrive here tonight in place of the Reliance.

Constable Jackson left on the morning train for Oregon City where he goes to arrest D. McKelvey, of Antelope, on a warrant sworn out in Justice Brownhill's court charging him with stealing a mare from C. W. Haight of this city. McKelvey, it is alleged, picked up the animal on the range and took her with some other horses to the Willamette valley to dispose of them there.

The special committee appointed at the last meeting of the city council to report on the Court street sewer met yesterday and after carefully looking over the situation concluded to report on this sewer being drained into Mill Creek through the alley back of the Columbia hotel, instead of under the railroad track as now and out at the west end of the Regulator warehouse.

Beyond any question the majority of the people of The Dalles want a street fair and it is equally beyond question that it would pay The Dalles to have it a hundred fold. But it will take money to make suitable preparation for a street fair and still more to make suitable preparation for the district fair, and the one must not be held without the other. Are the business men of The Dalles willing to put up the money to make this preparation? That is the question that a volunteer committee will try to solve probably tomorrow.

Representative Moody received a telegram yesterday afternoon, too late to appear in THE CHRONICLE, announcing that the boat conveying the congressional committee from Alaska had not arrived at Seattle and would be a day late. The only effect of this delay will be that the dates arranged for the visit of the committee to the several points east of here will be one day later in each case. Messrs. Moody, Schenck and McCoy will leave The Dalles tonight for Lewiston on the special train that will arrive here about 9 o'clock with the Portland delegation. The congressional committee and party will arrive here Thursday instead of tomorrow, as previously announced.

The railroad men of this place, says the La Grande Chronicle, report a peculiarly unfortunate accident that befell a tramp who was riding the brakes of a train on the Short Line last week. The tramp's clothing became ignited on the back by a spark from the engine and he, like the stoic Greek of old who rather than disturb a sacred meeting by his movements let a spark on his sleeve burn to the bone, permitted the flame to burn all the clothing from his back and fairly cook the skin. His reasons, however, were not so exalted as those of the Greek and it is probable that he created a disturbance. He didn't extinguish the flames because he couldn't turn over to do so, and to fall off meant instant death. When the train, after several ages, finally pulled into the station he was a candidate for a protracted stay in the nearest hospital.

A. L. Anderson, the railroad contractor, and late an extensive wheat raiser of the Klickitat valley, arrived here today from Kalama, where he has been working on the new road being built between that town and Vancouver. Mr. Anderson has obtained a sub-contract from J. H. Smith, of Portland, for building part of the new grade about to be built by the O. R. & N. Co. between The Dalles and tunnel No. 3, some nine or ten miles west of here. Mr. Anderson came here today to select a location for his camp, which will be made for the present somewhere below Crates Point. He informed THE CHRONICLE that his men and horses and equipments will reach here early next week, and work will be commenced as soon as possible after their arrival. Most of the other sections of the road have been sub-let and the chief contractors have bound themselves to have their part of the work finished by June, 1902. The work will employ 1000 to 1500 men for nearly a year.

The president's proclamation of July 1st reserves from settlement and entry the following lands in Wasco county: The south half of Township one South, townships two south, three south and four south, range eleven east, Willamette meridian; townships five south, range nine and ten east; and so much of townships six south, ranges nine and ten east, as lies north of the Warm Springs Indian Reservation. From the force and effect of the proclamation are exempted all lands which may have been prior to July 1st, embraced in any legal entry or covered by any lawful filing duly of record in the proper United States Land Office, or upon which any valid settlement has been made pursuant to law, and the statutory period within which to make entry or filing of record has not expired: Provided that this exception shall not continue to apply to any particular tract of land unless the entryman, settler or claimant continues to comply with the law under which the entry, filing or settlement was made. Warning is given to all persons not to make settlement upon the tract of land reserved by the proclamation.

"I am indebted to One Minute Cough cure for my present good health and my life. I was treated in vain by doctors for lung trouble following a gripple. I took One Minute Cough Cure and recovered my health." Mr. E. H. Wise, Madison, Ga. Clarke & Falk's P. O. Pharmacy.

We offer for a limited period the twice-a-week CHRONICLE, price $1.50, and the Weekly Oregonian, price $1.50, both papers for $2 a year. Subscriptions under this offer must be paid in advance.
