Bit Off More'n He Could Chaw.

One of the prominent dishes on the menu card of last night's banquet was "Trout with Tartare Sauce." And it was a delicious adjunct to an elegant repast, as this deponent well knows, who, through the courtesy of John Burns, the gentlemanly steward of the Regulator, had a chance to sample a couple of the speckled beauties the night before. Where the fish came from of course nobody in the world knows, and it is altogether probable the congressional party will never know how near they came of being deprived of this delectable dish.

We have a deputy game warden here. At least Louis Fritz says he is a game warden, and if anyone doubts it he shows a star. But while the game and fish laws are openly violated every day; while fish are caught out of season, and in illegal numbers; while trout streams are filled with sawdust or have high dams built across them; while baskets full of trout enter the city from outside places almost every day in the week; and these violations of the law, if they are all violations, are open and notorious; if the deputy game warden has ever seriously bothered himself to bring the offenders to justice this purveyor of news has never heard of it.

Yesterday, however, it was different. The city had a large number of guests whom it wanted to honor. The best we had or could procure was none too good and so somebody provided a course of brook trout. The fish had been placed in cold storage and yesterday afternoon, about the time they were needed at the kitchen of the Regulator, Andy Steel, clerk for the Dalles Commission Company, put them on the delivery wagon and drove to the store for more supplies. This was the opportunity for immortalizing himself that Louis had looked forward to for several hours. So going up to the wagon he showed his star as his warrant of authority, and peeping under the cover of the boxes as if he was ignorant of their contents he pulled them off the wagon, sat down on them and, like a boy in his first pants, proceeded to yell at the top of his voice: "Hi there! See what I ketch'd! Do you want a mess of trout?" His cries of course attracted a little crowd, and when Louis had demonstrated that he was the greatest deputy game warden the world ever saw he hired an express wagon and removed the fish to the cellar of his residence up on the bluff. Meanwhile the steward of the Regulator appeared on the scene and offered to put up indemnity bonds to any amount desired, conditioned that the fish should be released. Louis, however, was obdurate. Justice must have her way though the heavens should drop, and the fish must be taken to his own cellar if he had to eat every one of them himself.

It was in the neighborhood of 6 o'clock when Louis swore out a warrant in Judge Doherty's court for the arrest of John Burns, C. W. Simonson and A. L. Steel. The prisoners were soon rounded up and arraigned before Judge Doherty, and Attorney E. B. Dufur was present as the representative of the state. The attempt to prove through the complaining witness that the prisoners had sold, bought, or ever owned a single trout in the entire lot, ended in a farce. Louis had bit off more than he could chew. Steward Burns of the Regulator proved to the satisfaction of the court and everybody else, including probably even the deputy game warden, that the fish had been put on the Regulator by the boat's crew, at White Salmon, and the only thing that Mr. Simonson and his clerk had to do with them was that they were asked to pack them in ice and place them in cold storage till such time as they were needed. Judge Doherty very sensibly dismissed the case.

A Remarkable Octogenarian.

Although eighty-two years old this summer, Mrs. H. P. Van Cleave, "the first white baby born in the Northwest," is still vigorous of mind and actively interested in the world's affairs. She lives in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Her life as told in the Ladies' Home Journal for August, is a picturesque and exciting one. Born at Fort Crawford, Wisconsin, on July 1, 1819, the daughter of one army officer and the widow of another, she passed through all the trials, hardships and adventures of military and pioneer life on the frontier, and although she has spent most of her later years in cities, her experiences have still been of a varied and unusual character. Her golden wedding anniversary was celebrated more than fifteen years ago.

The Eugene Register sarcastically says: "If all the rest of the republican newspaper men are going to enter the race for state printer we might as well announce ourselves and make it unanimous."

Henry Dosch writes from the Buffalo Exposition that Oregon cherries "take the bakery and the girl behind the counter for size and beauty, and are just four times as large as any other cherries in the horticultural building."

Joe Oakes, an opium fiend, who was committed by Commissioner Hudson to the United States grand jury about a month ago on a charge of selling whiskey to Indians, was today sentenced to six months in the Wasco county jail, and a fine of $100.

Public schools have about fifteen months yet in which to change from the old to the new series of school books, but the book firms, who allow 50 per cent exchange on old books, will not exchange after Dec. 31st this year. Probably most of the schools will commence using the new books this year, at the opening of the fall term.

County Clerk Lake is an old-time saw mill man, as everybody knows. He was so long accustomed to the odor of the Wamie pine trees that he keeps a sack of sawdust in his office to smell thereat whenever he feels a longing for his old occupation. If you think this is a yarn take a peep into the telephone closet the first time you are in the clerk's office.

A. A. Bonney, stock inspector of Wasco county, in his annual report to the county court, among other things says: "I do not know of any mange in horses at this time, but think it quite probable that there are some." The fact of the matter is, there is mange among the range horses of Wasco county, and if the stock inspector does not know of it he should, as no one pretends to keep it a secret. We might add, "where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise."—Shaniko Leader.

A reception was given last evening at the home of Mrs. McCune on Union Street to Mr. and Mrs. Wetherell, two former residents of this city, who were married in Spokane last week and who are returning from a trip to Wind River to make their future home in Heppner. A dainty supper was served and a very pleasant and enjoyable time was had. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Wetherell, Mesdames McCune, Ward, Bagley, Francisco, Johnson, Hoering, Hayes, Weber, Misses Georgie and Bertha Johnson, Lucy Fox, Jennie Martin, Eva Bagley, Ida Ward, Alice Smith of Illinois, and Meers George Egbert, Robert O'Brien and Joe Martin.

The commissioners of the Second Oregon District Agricultural Fair Association, who met in this city yesterday afternoon, organized by electing Robert Mays president, J. S. Fish, treasurer, and W. W. Williams secretary. The time for holding the fair was fixed at October 1st to 5th. All the counties in the district were represented either in person or by proxy except Morrow and Umattila. In order to facilitate the holding of future meetings of the association and the transaction of business that may require prompt attention Commissioner Kuney, of Sherman county, gave his proxy to E. M. Williams, and Commissioner Duke, of Gilliam county, gave his to L. E. Crowe.

The Congressional Party's Visit.

The congressional party reached The Dalles yesterday at 7:30 p. m. and dinner was not served till a full hour and a half later. This disconcerted previously announced plans and, as a result, by the time dinner was over it was too late for the reception at the club rooms. After dinner short speeches were made by Representative Moody, Chairman Burton and Hon. E. L. Smith, of Hood River.

At a little after six this morning a special train took the party with a few Dalles people up the river as far as Celilo where they remained inspecting the river obstructions at all the important points, and returned here at a little after eleven o'clock. This was by far the most satisfactory incident of the entire visit. The committee, after viewing the obstructions at close range, were impressed as never before that at the principal obstruction there is a natural canal of 9000 feet in length that, according to the latest suggestion in Mayor Hart's report, only requires to be widened out to the necessary proportions and have a lock at the upper end of the basalt gorge, with a 3000-foot canal and locks around the falls at Celilo. This personal inspection of the river obstructions was worth more to the cause of an open river than any other incident of the Inland Empire trip and from it the very best results are expected.

The party boarded the Regulator at noon and, after steaming up as far as Three-Mile rapids the boat turned her prow towards the Locks and Portland.

Did Not Say It.

NEW YORK, July 25.—A letter has been received from T. Estrada Palma to Horatio Reubens, in which the former denies the assurance in favor of the annexation of Cuba to the United States, attributed to him, says a dispatch from Havana to the Tribune. He denies also that General Maximo Gomez made similar declarations on the same occasion, and says he (Palma) and Gomez both favor absolute independence and oppose annexation. The leaders of all political parties requested the publication of the letter from Senator Palma.
