

WORDS OF HOPE.

Before leaving Portland, Chairman Burton, of the rivers and harbors committee, said to an Oregonian reporter:

"Our committee completes this first visit to the Pacific coast with the feeling that it is as well acquainted with this part of the nation and its needs in the way of river and harbor improvements as it is with any other part of the country, an acquaintance that is a source of satisfaction and will be of great usefulness in congress.

"We have seen many of your rivers and harbors, and we have seen your magnificent country and many of its resources. The agricultural wealth of the country speaks for itself at this season of the year. The timber is also plain to be seen. I am convinced that the mineral output, already quite large, will be greatly increased as the mines shall be developed and adequate transportation facilities shall be supplied. I rather expect to see this region a leader in the world's production of gold and copper.

"The awakening world of trade beyond the Pacific draws unusual interest to this coast. I am free to express my interest in the development of trans-Pacific commerce. I think the nation should give every proper encouragement to this field. The outlook, as I see it, is bright for our trade with Japan, but there is still much uncertainty about China. I regard the situation and opportunities of our Pacific coast as very promising. The demands of Oriental commerce will have the consideration of our committee in connection with navigation improvements asked for."

Representative Walter Reeves, of Illinois, who ranks next to Chairman Burton on the committee, said:

"With special reference to the Columbia, I will say that I was agreeably surprised at the magnificent stream formed by the Snake and Columbia. The great expense for the improvement of the Columbia comes at two points, at its mouth and at The Dalles. Without attempting to commit myself or the committee in any manner, I have no hesitation in saying that a deep channel must be made at the mouth of the Columbia.

"Concerning the dalles, I am deeply impressed with the opinion that the cost of the proposed canal has been greatly overestimated. The present estimate for that improvement is $4,000,000, while the original estimate was $6,000,000. Part of the way there is already a natural canal of half sufficient size, and with modern facilities for excavating both earth and stone and with locks of reasonable and proper proportion, I cannot see why the work cannot be done for $2,000,000. So far as I know, the members of the committee have not discussed the problem, and I dare say will not until they meet in the committee-room next winter.

Representative De Alva S. Alexander, of New York, said:

"We expected to be interested in the Pacific coast, but I think we were hardly prepared for the surprises which have come to us. We knew in a general way, of course, of the Columbia river and its tributaries; but the tremendous Inland Empire which we found east of the Cascades was certainly an eye-opener to the committee. We do not need to think what it will be in fifty years. It is large enough now to command the respect and help of the national government to a degree far beyond what most people in the East would be willing to concede.

"Portland is the natural headquarters of a great agricultural country, and once the impediments to navigation are removed every farmer and merchant will be greatly benefited. The producer of wheat will get 33 1-3 per cent more for his labor than he now receives. The people may rest assured that the committee knows their country and its needs, and that written arguments and labored speeches are no longer necessary to bring all the pecuniary assistance that the committee can, in its judgment, afford."
