WILL SCALE CASTLE ROCK.

A Party Will Make This Climb the Latter Part of August.

The Telegram says that Frank J. Smith and Walter T. Stowell, managers of the Regulator Line exploring party, are perfecting arrangements to scale the summit of Beacon Rock, or, as it is more familiarly called Castle Rock, the lofty mountain peak situated on the upper Columbia river, about 35 miles from Portland by water route.

So far as is known its scarred and precipitous sides have never been climbed by white man, and probably a century has elapsed since the last great Indian chieftain was laid to rest on its summit.

Castle Rock is probably 1000 feet in height, but this is but an approximate figure, as no measurement was ever taken. Its base covers 13 1/4 acres of ground, while at the top it measures at least an acre in extent. Vague rumors have it that for ages the summit of this most peculiar formation of rock served as a burial ground of the great chieftains of the tribe of the Gonomanians. The whole country surrounding the rock is rich in romantic legend, and the ground is strewn in great profusion with Indian relics and the bleaching bones of the aborigines. In 1856 this was the very scene of a terrible Indian massacre. It was in this vicinity General Grant spent the earlier days of his life.

After making the ascent of Castle Rock the party proposes to extend the trip to take in the ruins of the Bridge of the Gods, from whence the view is unsurpassed.

The trip from Portland and the ascent of the rock will take at least four days, and all of two weeks will be consumed in completing the trip.

Among those to accompany the party will be George M. Weister, official photographer; Dr. Hamilton Meade, physician; Charles E. Sawyer, statistician; official botanist, geologist, heliograph signal man, and reporters and artists of the leading dailies and magazines of Oregon and Washington. John Baughman and William R. McCord, two well-known old timers on the Columbia river, will guide the party. The start will be made in the latter part of August.

A reconnoitering party will leave Portland on the steamer Regulator next Sunday for the base of Castle Rock to make preliminary survey in order that a route may be established to the summit and so that proper appliances may be secured. They will also report on camping places and a most accessible route to Archer Mountain and the abutment to the Bridge of the Gods.

Valise Lost.

A few days since a valise, containing valuable government papers, was taken (probably through mistake) from our wagon at the railroad camp on the mission grounds below town. As these papers cannot be replaced without great expense and delay, the party who took them will confer a favor on us by leaving them at THE CHRONICLE office or returning them to us through the post-office. No mistake as to the identity of the papers can be made as the name of W. R. Stewart will be found thereon.

in attendance as it will be a treat which we are lucky in receiving.

About the middle of the day last Tuesday the barn on Z. F. Moody's place at the old Miller bridge burned to the ground. It was well filled with hay and contained a span of mules, which were also victims of the flames. Ex-Governor Moody arrived from Salem last night and left for the ranch this morning.

The fame of "Jack the Ripper" and "Jack the Hugger" came near being ruined in Astoria by the actions of a kiss-thrower named Alferd E. Wilson. There was nothing stingy about Wilson, who promiscuously threw kisses at everybody, regardless of race, color or previous condition of servitude. He is in the state hospital for the insane by this time.

When Rev. U. F. Hawk arrived home from Collins today he discovered that someone had broken into his house during his absence and ransacked things. So far, however, he could not find that anything had been taken, and therefore concludes they at once discovered it was a minister's home and they had got into the wrong pew.

In the near future Dr. D. Siddall expects to commence the erection of four dwelling houses on his property on the corner of Fourth and Federal streets. Dwelling houses are now greatly in demand and by fall it will be almost impossible to secure a place of residence here, unless some of our property owners follow Dr. Siddall's example and build on their vacant lots.

Prostrations from heat are almost unknown on the coast. However, Walla Walla furnished one instance Tuesday when a section hand at the Washington and Columbia River railway depot succumbed at 11 o'clock that morning. He was seen suddenly to reel, her face and hands were swollen badly and his skin turned blue. As the temperature was only 97 it is thought the man's blood was in poor condition and his health bad, which caused the heat to have an unusual effect on him.

There is no doubt that at our very doors we have a health resort equal to any in the United States and which if properly conducted, would be as great a boon to suffering humanity as any yet discovered. We refer to St. Martin's Springs. Visitors who have returned from that place tell us that a gentleman who left there yesterday offered the owners $48,000 for a ten-year lease, with the assurance that he would make improvements to the amount of $15,000. The offer, however, was refused.

At 6 o'clock last evening, after years of suffering, Mrs. Margaret Flynn died at her home on Tenth street at the age of 81 years. The funeral will take place from the Catholic church tomorrow morning at 9:45 o'clock. Tomorrow's CHRONICLE will contain an account of the life of the deceased, it being impossible to obtain facts today. Word received from her son, Dr. Flynn, of Portland, is to the effect that it will be impossible for him to be here on account of illness. His wife and Dr. Johnson, a nephew of Mrs. Flynn, will arrive tonight.

THE CHRONICLE is always glad to receive news of every kind sent into the office. If you have some one visiting you, the reporter may not hear of it. Such matters are of interest and it is a convenience for their friends to know they are here. It is thus entirely proper for you to jot down the item and send it in, or telephone it in. There are hundreds of ways in which you can help the local force, with little inconvenience to yourself. It is such neighborliness and acts of kindness that help the work of the busy reporter and add interest to the columns of the paper.

Our councilmen seem to be carrying on protracted meetings this week, having met last night and arranging for another meeting tomorrow night. At last night's meeting the report of R. H. Thomas in reference to the city's books was read and ordered filed. The recorder was also instructed to draw a warrant for $87 in favor of Mr. Thomas. On motion of Mr. Kelley M. T. Nolan was ordered to appear in person at the next meeting and give explanation concerning the security on his note. Another matter of business was the petition of Mr. Ulrich asking to be allowed to use a piece of the land on the beach for gardening purposes.

Arthur Hampton, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Hampton, of Monmouth, died at The Dalles Hospital this morning at 2:30 o'clock. The young man, though a boy in years, being aged 15, was a man in stature, six feet two inches in height and a fine looking fellow. He had been with his sister, Mrs. S. A. Johnson, of Wasco, a short time, and when taken ill was working in the harvest field. He was brought to the hospital here last Friday and operated on that night for appendicitis, but with a forlorn hope when his condition was known. His mother arrived Saturday and remained with him, and his father reached here last night. His remains were taken to Monmouth today for burial.

If the good work of the forest reserve supervisor goes on we may be assured that we will not suffer from forest fires so far as Mr. Dufur's district is concerned. He informs us that the smoke which settled down a few days ago was caused by fires on the Washington side of the river. Up to the time that he made his last report—August 3d—there had been no fires to speak of, the vigilance of the rangers preventing. They report having put out twelve incipient blazes on the Northern division and two on the Bull Run reserve. Some good work was done during the month of July, among which was the building of a bridge thirty feet in length and seven feet wide, over the Warm Springs fork of the Clackamas, clearing 150 miles of trail and putting in twenty-five miles of new trail.

It is not strange that visitors to New York from the Western coast return feeling that their next visit will be made when the thermometer is registering zero. Reports say that last month was the hottest July in New York since the weather bureau records were begun thirty-one years ago.

Charles O. Jones, one of the prominent speakers at the Epworth League convention recently held in San Francisco, arrived on the boat this afternoon and has been the guest of Rev. U. F. Hawk during the remainder of the day. Mr. Hawk has arranged to have him speak at the Methodist church this evening at 8 o'clock and hopes to see a large number
