

A HARMONIOUS PARTY.

This week the republicans of Iowa and Maryland have held state conventions and showed that they are thoroughly united. It was the same in the earlier convention in Ohio. Republicans everywhere have good reason to be satisfied with their party and this is the feeling manifested. Iowa republicans, whose plurality last year almost touched 100,000, held a splendid convention and adopted a platform in full accord with the principles of the party. Until March 4, 1903, republicans will be in control of all branches of the government, and the term can be extended by the election of a republican majority in the next house, the prospect of which is undeniably good. No dissensions are smoldering within republican lines. National conditions are highly satisfactory. There is a continued treasury surplus, and it promises (democratic papers say threatens) to be larger than was expected after the war taxes were reduced.

The opposition, on the other hand, is torn up in an astonishing way. One wing of the democratic party is studying how it can best repudiate the national platforms and leader of the last two campaigns. In this singular operation democratic leaders admit that they cannot foretell results. In Missouri the day of reckoning is put off until next year in hope that the party division will be less acute. It may, however, grow worse instead of better, and Mr. Bryan's attitude indicates that it will. The republicans have every reason to believe that they can maintain the present wise effectiveness in all departments of the government and enjoy the confidence of the people by deserving it. They have states to win, and Missouri is one of them. One of the questions here is republican disfranchisement, and that should induce every republican in the state to do his utmost.

GREAT WHEAT YIELDS.

The reports of the yield of wheat in the Palouse country this year are little short of sensational, says the Review. Forty bushels to the acre has been considered a heavy yield, but this year it hardly calls for comment. Instances are reported almost daily of farms going over fifty bushels to the acres, and the total yield is certain to be a record breaker.

What is to be especially noted is that some of the farms that are producing the best crops of wheat are on land which a few years ago was considered worthless. It was called sage brush desert and was of no value except as a piece for poor pasturage. People settled upon it with misgivings, for it was thought that it might be impossible to raise anything on the land and any attempt to improve it would be time, money and labor wasted.

As a matter of fact this despised land has turned out to be highly productive, and it is destined to become one of the most profitable wheat raising sections in the state. It is not improbable that from this very land which a few years ago would not have been taken as a gift, there will be raised a larger amount of wheat than in any other section in the state of equal area. This will be a great year both as to showing what amount of wheat may be raised, and also as to where it may be raised.

And still the mining deals continue to be made, and the money changes hands and the instruments are signed, sealed and recorded. Of course, old Oregon is still asleep; but some new blood, as well as foreign capital, is finding its way into these gold fields and things "look good" in these mineral ribbed Blue mountains. It would seem that this activity will sooner or later fructify into a peach of a mining boom. Let the good people get together and, metaphorically speaking, pound out, metaphorically speaking, pound out of shape the first knocker who strikes a hammer blow at any trade, big or little.—Sumpter Miner.
