Louis Delco, of Wamic, was adjudged insane yesterday and was taken to the asylum in Salem this morning by Deputy Sheriff Sexton.

The funeral of the late W. H. Vanbibber will take place from the family residence, three miles below the city, at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Miss Oia Norman, a graduate of the High school in the 1900 class, has accepted the position as teacher in the Mosier school, which begins next Monday.

All parents will no doubt take advantage of A. M. Williams & Co.'s liberal offer in boys' clothing. This firm allows a rebate of 10 per cent in school books, on all purchases in boys' clothing until the 12th inst.

The remains of "Rocky" Chenoweth were brought to this city today from St. Martins Springs and the funeral will take place from Crandall and Burget's undertaking parlors tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Word was telegraphed his mother, who sent word to give him as nice a funeral as possible.

A good sized audience was present at the Vogt last night when the biograph pictures of the Passion Play were exhibited. While not so clear as those shown some time since at the same place, they were life-like, so much so that many were affected by the scenes portrayed. At the ringing of the fire bell, which invariably causes a tumult among Dalles people who have suffered so much by fire, all but about a half dozen of the audience dispersed, and so missed the best part of the program.

The O. R. & N. Co. will give a rate of 1 1/2 fare for the round trip to those attending the Woolgrowers Association at Heppner, September 17th and 18th. This will be on the certificate plan, subject to 50 or more who have paid full railroad fare of 50 cents or more. Tickets good to return on the 19th.

THE CHRONICLE job department has just gotten out some immense bills for the carnival and district fair which cannot fail to catch the eye of every passer-by. Everything is being done to advertise our fair and no doubt the city will be jammed with visitors, who, if the committee has its way, will not be disappointed.

Last night Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Brooks left on the Telegram excursion for the East to be absent about two months, visiting the Pan-American exposition en route. During their absence Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Collins will occupy their residence, Mr. and Mrs. William Freden having moved into the Collins residence a few days since.

At the meeting of Friendship lodge, K. of P. last Monday evening, J. A. Douthit, of the Times-Mountaineer, was honored by being appointed a delegate to the grand lodge which convenes in Portland during the month of October. Mr. Douthit is one of Friendship's most worthy and faithful members and the lodge could not have made a better choice.

Robert Mays and son bought of A. A. Bonney about 1250 head of half-blood Shropshire lambs, at $2 per head. The deal was made last Friday while Mr. Bonney was visiting our town, and the sheep are to be delivered at his ranch before October 1st. The price is a good one and overthrows all the arguments that have been made for low prices for lambs this fall.—Antelope Herald.

A man by the name of Reed, a sheepherder for the Baldwin Sheep and Land Co., entered a saloon in the East End last night hunting trouble. He held a revolver under the proprietor's nose and snapped the trigger three times; but fortunately the cartridges did not explode. The weapon was a Smith & Wesson 44-caliber and the indentures are plainly discernible on the cartridge. Reed was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Sexton today, and this afternoon he was examined by Justice Brownhill for the crime.

We understand an investigation is being made as to the cause of the runaway Monday when the lives of two children were jeopardized, and some one is liable at least to be taught a lesson which he will not soon forget. There is too much careless riding going on in The Dalles, and the wonder is that more accidents do not occur. There is an ordinance against fast riding through our streets, which should be enforced, and it would be well to add another ordinance against riding broncos through our streets in the manner in which it is done every few days. Boys, and men also, are in the habit of tearing down the main streets, for the sake of showing off, and by so doing endanger the lives of women and children, who may be driving, for no horse, however gentle, will stand being ridden into as was the case Monday.

OUR OLD ENEMY.

The Fire Demon Destroys Porter's Stable and Gilbreth's Lumbering Business.

Just so often in the history of The Dalles must we be visited by the fire demon, and for fear we were having too long a respite he made his usual call last night about 10 o'clock. When the first sound of the alarm was heard, and people from force of habit turned their eyes toward the East End, a blaze of fire met their eyes, and showed that Lewis Porter's stable, on the corner of Second and Laughlin street, was doomed. Mr. Porter had just left the stable when a blaze leaped from the back part of the building upstairs. Seeing there was no hope of putting it out the men sounded the alarm and began moving things out. Mr. Porter returned and at once began letting the horses loose. There was a large number of animals in the stable, but they had little difficulty in getting them out. As Mr. Porter went to turn Dutch McCoy's horse loose the fire was coming down the hay chute lively, but he succeeded in cutting his halter, although the animal kicked desperately, and he was saved.

Though the building is totally destroyed, the horses, wagons and all but one harness and the neck yoke of W. H. Wilson's shetlands was saved. As a matter of fact there was much paraphernalia not mentioned, but representing money, which was lost.

We were unable to determine the exact loss sustained, but understand Mr. Porter was well insured. However coming at this particular time the damage to the business cannot be estimated.

In spite of hard work, the flames spread to the lumber yard and building of R. B. Gilbreth, just east, and soon it was enveloped. From this nothing was saved excepting a small amount of lumber, most of which was damaged. We understand Mr. Gilbreth had a large stock of paints, oils, glass, etc., and his loss is estimated at almost $5000, with little more than $1000 insurance. This is a severe loss to the owner, who has not been in business a year yet, and who is a hard-working and worthy citizen.

Beside these two firms J. T. Peters lost $100 on his building opposite; Filloon $150 on stock stored with Gilbreth; Pease & Mays' warehouse, about $300; Mrs. Periano, the milliner, also suffered a slight loss on her building, as did also Watte of the marble works and Markille, of the gent's furnishing store. It is generally conceded the fire was of incendiary origin. Mr. Porter tells us he suspects a hobo, who came into his barn yesterday and created much disturbance. Porter put him out, and as he left he was heard to remark: "I'll get even with you for this."

Mr. Porter is always foremost in helping others at such a time of need, and in turn last night our fire boys did themselves proud. Indeed the entire city cannot say too much in their praise. We feel safe when The Dalles fire department is at work.

WILLIAM H. VANBIBBER.

Particulars Regarding His Terrible Death and Concerning His Life.

Upon receiving the startling news of the suicide of Wm. Vanbibber yesterday afternoon at a time so near our publication hour we were unable to give but the meagerest report, but upon inquiry we understand that Mr. Vanbibber had given no sign in the morning of an unusual despondency. On the contrary, early in the morning he offered to assist his wife with her washing, but she declined saying she was afraid he might make his rheumatism worse by putting his hands into the water. He then said he would go down into the bean patch and told the hired man to harness Mrs. Vanbibber's horse as she wished to go to town later. He was accustomed to coming in for his lunch about noon, and as he failed to return, Tom Laursen, who is employed by them, started to the garden to look for him. Going through the cow shed on his way down he saw Mr. Vanbibber at the other end of the shed and being unable to discern his position from where he stood, called to him. What was the man's horror as he came nearer to find he had hung himself. Taking a medium-sized rope he had thrown it twice over a scantling about a foot above his head and held the end with his left hand. His knees were slightly bent, his toes touching the ground. The young man at once ran to the house, and Wil Vanbibber himself carefully lifted the body down and removed it to the house. Neighbors were then sent for and arrived in a short time, when word was brought to the city. Dr. Shackelford, the family physician, the undertaker and Coroner Butte at once went down, but the latter deemed it unnecessary to hold an inquest.

William H. Vanbibber, who was born in Missouri sixty-seven years ago last June, came to The Dalles in the early 60's. A short time after he was employed by Mr. Marsh, who kept a dairy below the city. In '65 he went into the same business for himself, and from that time until a year ago he has been a familiar figure driving into our city each morning and supplying his customers with milk. On November 10, 1867 he was married to Miss Johann Marsh, Rev. John T. Wolf performing the ceremony. To them two sons were born, William, who survives him, and Marcus, who was drowned in the Columbia three years ago.

About a year ago Mr. Vanbibber had a severe attack of lung fever, from which he never fully survived, and of late has suffered much with rheumatism, having about lost the use of his right hand. Sunday he said to his son, "Wil, I have lost my right hand and will soon lose the use of my leg. I'd rather be dead than helpless." His suffering, together with a despondency which had come from the loss of his son and the fact that he was compelled by ill health to give up his occupation, is thought to have been the cause of the final dejection, which no doubt led to the act that caused his death. His friends have remarked of late that "Van" was not himself.

The shock which came to the community was great, for he was a friend to everybody and everybody a friend of his. Upright, good natured, honest and a splendid citizen, he will be sadly missed. To his wife, who has been a constant, faithful helpmate, the shock comes with terrible force; and, together with her son, she has the deepest sympathy of all.

Beside his wife and son, Mr. Vanbibber leaves a brother, who lives at Lyle.

Fire

Owing to the general shake-up occasioned by last night's fire, the Hub Clothing Co.'s store is closed till tomorrow, so that the stock can be put in order.

Some of the goods were in a small degree damaged by water, and the price on these tomorrow will be liberally reduced. Keep your eyes open.
