PATRIOTIC SENTIMENT.

The last words spoken by President McKinley in a public address were those of Thursday, when he said: "Our most earnest prayer is that God will most graciously vouchsafe prosperity, happiness and peace to all our neighbors, and like blessings to all the peoples and powers of earth."

The true American is made to blush for his country when he remembers that three great and good presidents have fallen at the hands of assassins during the last thirty-seven years. No throne of Europe has such a bloody record. Do we grant the degenerate foreigners too much free speech?—Baker Republican.

The beauty of the wounded man's disposition has been shown in this trying ordeal. He thought first of his wife, that frail little woman who is more than life to him. He told her to be brave for both their sakes. How brave he was himself to consider her even in his hour of great distress and mental and physical anguish. The world is not peopled with such men; they are too few.—W. W. Union.

The anarchist must go. His hand is lifted against the state and society, and so long as he is allowed to preach his doctrines and put them to execution there is no safety for the individual or our institutions. His principles are foreign, as is his ancestry, and his presence is not to be tolerated in a country founded and governed as the United States has been. In a land of liberty, equality and opportunity there is no room for these creatures of disordered intellect. They are enemies to the government, to the home, to the family, to everything that society holds dear. They are sworn to an eternal warfare on the existing order of things and their program means destruction of life, law and property.—Spokesman-Review.

The worst disgraced spot in America on Friday night was Patterson, N. J. One is at a loss how to fix the greatest blame to the people and the authorities of that town—whether for the cowardice which allowed a gang of anarchists to celebrate the shooting of President McKinley with toasts and rejoicing, or for the shamelessness with which they allowed the fact to be published to the world. It is doubtful if there was another spot in the United States where such a "celebration" would have failed to result in the annihilation of the tribe of celebrants.—Salem Statesman.

A man once passing through Albany said to a resident of this city: "I am an anarchist. My mission is to destroy the family, the church and the government." Men with such missions are entitled to no consideration. Fortunately we have no anarchists here permanently. The mission of good men should be to build up the family, the church and the government.—Albany Democrat.

Evidence from different parts of the country shows that it has gone hard with the man who has seen fit to speak of a wounded president in uncomplimentary language. Several cheap characters received well deserved pummeling for inappropriate references, and thus far the only one who has escaped a thrashing is Senator Wellington, of Maryland.—Review.

The people anxiously await any news from the bed of the wounded president, and every telegram from Buffalo is eagerly read. Sympathy with the wife is universal, and if Mr. McKinley dies, the "deep damnation of his taking off" will arouse anger in every heart of our millions of people.
