MEMORIAL SERVICES

Monday a solemn Christian Service, at 10 o'clock, at the Congregational Church.

"Assassination! Assassination! What awful words! What suggestions of the blackest, foulest diabolism present themselves to the mind and ear at the mere pronunciation of these two words! Crimes of crimes—the assassination of America's executive head, here at home, on American soil, by a so-called 'American!'"

These were the opening words of the address given in the Congregational church of this city last night by the pastor, D. V. Poling, who took as the foundation of his remarks these words, "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?"

The speaker denominated the crime as an ancient one. "The operations of this crime are easily traceable from early times up to the present. In the case of the last assassination the blow was struck not against Wm. McKinley, of Ohio, but against Wm. McKinley, president of the United States of America; it was a blow against rule and authority as such. It simply shows the weakness and viciousness of the doctrine taught by teachers of law ideals and superficial thinking that it makes but little difference what a man believes so long as he is sincere. Caligula believed with all his heart in his creed. It was a Godless, Christless creed. Here it is as given by Bakunine, who was the founder of the anarchist movement: 'Brethren, I come to announce to you a new gospel. This gospel admits no half measures nor hesitations. The old world must be destroyed and replaced by a new one. The lie must be stamped out and give way to Truth. The first lie is God; the second lie is Right. Might invented the fiction of Right to insure and strengthen her reign. Might should be in the hands of the nine-tenths of the human race whose immense power has been rendered subservient to the remaining tenth by means of that lying fiction of Right before which you are accustomed to bow your heads and drop your arms. When you have freed your minds from the fear of God and from that childish respect for the fiction of Right, then all the remaining chains that bind you, and which are called civilization—property, marriage, morality and justice, will snap asunder like threads. Let your own happiness be your only law. But in order to get this law recognized you must destroy everything as it now exists, the good with the bad, for if but one stem of this old world remains, the new will never be created.' 'This is the creed of the anarchists—the anarchists. Believing in it he has, during the past, struck down a czar of Russia, an emperor of Austria, a president of France, three presidents of the United States. It follows, then, that 'one belief isn't as good as another, and sometimes a little better.' A man's creed is a vital thing, it is a part of himself, and largely controls the movements of his life, either for good or evil. There are thousands of anarchists in America who are not so avowedly.

"Standing amid the stirring events of the recent past, good citizens do not despair. The currents of human history are largely changed by these unusual circumstances. What a occasion of national sentiment tonight. Bitter political foes stand by the bier of our renowned dead and mingle their tears in a common grief. The foundations of the nation rest secure in the integrity and loyalty of its citizens, evinced in our universal spontaneous grief.

"The sublime spectacle enacted before the office of a Chicago newspaper, following closely upon the announcement of the death of the president, is unmatched in the annals of history. How in striking contrast does it stand to that of the excited throng on New York's Broadway, gathered after the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. Then it was a time of war, of national strife; section arrayed against section; brother against brother. On last Saturday all alike bowed in grief and wept for him whom the whole nation mourned. Witness them as they stand in one solid mass, American citizens; the head of a bank rubbing clothes with the laborer covered with the dust of work; the old and decrepit mingling with the robust and the healthily active, while with uncovered heads and breaking hearts they sing that heart-searching hymn 'Nearer My God to Thee.' Surely naught but the death of a prince in Israel can call forth such a spontaneous tribute."

The church was well filled with a most appreciative audience, who listened with intense interest to the sermon and patriotic address. Against the wall behind the preacher was a fine view of the scene of the martyred president, surrounded with roses and the American flag. The music was appropriate to the occasion, the choir and organ contributing to the service. "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Hail, Holy Jesus" were the hymns sung.

An exchange says whenever you find a man finding fault with a local paper, open it up and see to see for him's own edification in it; for to see his own shortcomings is a job of work; that to see his own faults is a paper; but to see that if he is a subscriber he is a subscriber, and the publisher to see a paper, and duty to see that if the paper is a good one and full of life he is the most eager to see the paper when it comes out.

THE CHRONICLE is authorized to say that all The Dalles public warehouses will be closed all day next Thursday out of respect for the dead president. It is practically certain at this writing that the business houses will close on that day and that some arrangement will be made for holding public memorial services.

The Orono office is indebted to the courtesy of Mrs. J. M. Huntington for a rare and beautiful bouquet of strawberry vines, with the fruit in every stage of growth from the unopened blossom to the big red, ripe, luscious fruit. Mrs. Huntington expects to have ripe strawberries to exhibit at the coming carnival.

The Dufur Dispatch says: "Our friend, Mike Callaghan, found his way into this office this week with a broad smile on his countenance. Inquiry soon elicited the reason for the smile. He had just finished threshing a crop that yields him an average of forty-five bushels per acre. From thirty-five acres the yield was fifty-four bushels per acre."

In order that the local employees of the O. R. & N. Company might have an opportunity of attending the funeral of Engineers Haslam and Brees, every kind of work that could possibly be avoided was suspended yesterday. Even on the wreck operations were suspended and regular trains passed over a temporary track built around it. This thoughtful and kindly action on the part of the company is greatly appreciated by the employees.

Mr. Markille, of the Hub clothing house, succeeded yesterday afternoon in finding all the goods that he missed after the late robbery, counting what he found Saturday morning in the J. T. Fetare lumber yard. The goods found yesterday consist of thirteen pair of pants, three vests, three coats and four suits of underclothing. They were found stuffed in several places in the wood pile on the beach, at the foot of Washington street. The thieves have not been found, or are they likely to be.

Governor Gear has issued a proclamation which will be found in another column, recommending that "on Thursday, September 19th, and in respect of the memory of President McKinley, all public and private business be suspended as far as possible, that flags be placed at half-mast, that the people meet in their respective places of public worship to ask for that National consolation which can only come from Almighty God and that at the hour of the funeral all churches throughout the state be asked to open their doors to the people through the shadow of National bereavement."

The right-hands team, with tail-coat, of Frank Hamilton, manager of the... get ready for tomorrow at a wood-saw which was in operation near the Union street Lodging House and getting beyond the control of the driver turned round and dashed in an easterly direction at a gallop. As the crazy beast neared Washington street one of the wheel horses fell on the tongue and snapped it like a pipe-stem. In the league that followed the animals were gotten under control with no other damage than a number of scratches on the legs. Isn't it time that something were done to put a stop to accidents like the above? If this case the lead team had nearly passed the saw before it turned. Had the driver of the saw had the courtesy to stop sawing for only half a minute the accident would not have happened and the risk of the loss of life and property would have been avoided. The council should see to it that the men running steam-saws on the public streets should respect the rights of others.

All parties intending to make an exhibit at the coming district fair of any article in the class known as "Domestic Process," are requested to notify Mrs. C. L. Schmidt, chairman of the committee of this department, at their earliest convenience. Mrs. Schmidt's committee has jurisdiction over the following exhibits: Salt rising bread, potato or hop-rising bread, baking powder biscuit, steam brown bread, baked beans, layer cake, loaf cake, fruit cake, display of domestic bread, cakes and table luxuries, assortment of cakes, (not less than five), assortment of catsup and meat sauces, assortment of fruit jellies (eight or more), assortment of preserves (eight or more), assortment of jams (five or more), assortment of sour pickles (five or more), assortment of sweet pickles (five or more), collection of domestic canned fruits, display of wines (not less than four varieties), largest and best exhibit of machine-dried fruits and vegetables (not less than five specimens, five pounds each), assortment of hand-dried fruits. For each one of these classes there is a prize, the particulars of which may be found in the premium list, copies of which can be had at this office.
