ALL HAIL TO QUEEN MELVIA

The Queen's Arrival and Coronation
Witnessed by an Immense Crowd—
Everything Conspired to Make the Opening of the Fair and Carnival a Brilliant Success.

The opening of the carnival this afternoon was, as regards the attendance, a surprise to everybody. Thousands of people (how many it is impossible to tell) witnessed the arrival of the queen and the ceremonies connected with her coronation, and the question, "Where did these people all come from?" was on everybody's lips.

The day was perfect, and the opening ceremonies passed without a hitch.

The floats in the procession were probably not equal in number to those of last year, but some of them were very beautiful. Anything prettier than the cereal float of the Eastern Oregon Land Company was never seen here or anywhere. Next to it came the float of the Eagles, which well deserves special mention, as did that of J. T. Peters & Company.

About 1:30 p. m. Queen Melvia and her attendants arrived on the steamer Reliance and were met by the president of the carnival, Judge W. L. Bradshaw, the queen's prime minister, Judge G. C. Blakeley and Mayor G. J. Farley. With the queen came her maids of honor Misses Grace Glenn, Vesta Bolton, Elsie Carey, Rosemary Baldwin, Prudence Patterson and Valeria Liebe; her pages, Kenneth Claire Farley and Leland Benfer and attendants Uralie Crosby and Jessie Hosteler.

The queen looked very handsome in a gown of white satin, with a robe of crimson velvet. She was escorted to her carriage by Prime Minister Blakeley, and thus headed the procession to Second street under an escort of Co. D, O. N. G., and the Seventh Regiment Band.

Following the queen's carriage came the pages in a beautiful little "Governor's" carriage, drawn by two Shetland ponies in tandem, driven by Winnifred Wilson and escorted by two pages on foot, Glenn Patterson and Roger Seufert. Then followed two carriages containing the maids of honor, and back of them a carriage containing President Bradshaw, Prime Minister Blakeley and Mayor Farley.

Arriving at Second street the procession moved to the corner of Fourth and Washington, where a platform had been erected for the coronation and attendant ceremonies. When the queen and her attendants had taken their stand on the platform, President Bradshaw approached and bending the knee in respectful homage addressed her majesty in these words:

"Fair Queen: We extend to you a hearty greeting. You have been chosen from among many fair daughters of our city. We, your subjects, have gathered here today from the utmost parts of this grand Inland Empire to pay our respects and show our devotion to you, our chosen queen. We have not come empty handed, Fair Queen, but bring as offerings to you the choicest gifts of a rich and bounteous harvest. As we are gathered here on this beautiful afternoon, with the blue canopy of heaven above us, on pleasure bent, let us pause at the threshold and remember the Supreme Ruler of the Universe for the many blessings received at His hands, and may his richest blessing rest upon you, O Fair Queen, and upon the multitude here gathered. And now, O Fair Queen, on behalf of these your subjects here assembled, it is my pleasure and honor to crown you queen of The Dalles Carnival." After President Bradshaw had placed the crown upon the queen's head he stepped back a pace and saluting her majesty said: "And now, Most Gracious Queen, as you receive this ensign of your high station and assume the authority thus conferred, may the sunlight of love and affection radiate from your throne and permeate and fill the hearts of all present. May there be no harsh word nor unkind act to mar the pleasure of this meeting, so that when you, Fair Queen, lay aside these queenly robes and return to us again may the recollection of your reign as queen of The Dalles carnival be to you a bright and pleasant memory. And now, O Queen, with joyful hearts and good will to all we join in the glad acclaim, All hail Queen Melvia!"

As President Bradshaw ceased to speak a citizen standing in front of the platform jumped upon the steps and called for three cheers for Queen Melvia, which were given with a will. When the cheering had subsided, Mayor Farley saluted the queen and said:

YOUR ROYAL MAJESTY:
As is customary, as its executive, it is my duty to turn over to you the keys and archives of this city, to hold the same during your reign. I deem it appropriate at this time to inform you as to the manners and customs of these people.

The city as a whole, is in a prosperous condition; I know of no distress within the walls; the merchants are all happy by being busy in supplying the trade; the mechanic is working early and late to perform his part in the work of life; the laborer is contented with more than he can do, and all of us are pleased. There is no discord or discontent, and I feel safe in stating that you will find 'obedience' among us.

While a great calamity has just passed over us, it is our duty to heed the words of the Almighty. "Let the dead 'past' bury its dead." We must forget our sorrow and be happy. There are times when we should cast aside the shroud of grief and put on the garments of gladness. How ungrateful would we be were there not sunshine after the cloud, were there not quiet after the storm.

With these few remarks I present to your court and your ministry the key of Dalles City; with them you can control the outside gates; in these volumes you will find all records of this municipality. Expressing our gratitude for and appreciation of the great honor your advent confers upon our city, we bow in submission to your royal will.

The mayor then presented the queen with the keys and records of the city. These were accepted, on behalf of the queen, in a few well-chosen words by Prime Minister G. C. Blakeley. Then followed the review of the procession as it passed in front of the platform in the following order:

Chief Marshal Frank Menefee and staff.

Seventh U. S. Infantry regimental band.

Company D, O. N. G.

Eastern Oregon Land Company's cereal float.

Eagle's float and enormous imitation eagle mounted on a sully.

Miss Lulu Ward, driving four horses attached to a flower chariot.

Woodmen of the World float.

Ulrich, the cigar man, with a float covered with native, freshly cut tobacco.

Hack loaded with "Wise pianos and organs."

Float of J. T. Peters & Co.

Vehicle loaded with wet goods of C. J. Stubling & Co.

Dr. Walker on horseback, dressed in buckskin with Mexican sombrero.

A gentleman standing upright on the bare backs of two ponies.

Engineer George Brown, with fire engine, followed by firemen on foot.

Dr. Sanders in a hack loaded with apples built into the shape of one enormous big apple.

A couple of clowns on a rickety sully drawn by a big raw-boned mule resonant with cow bells.

Citizens in carriages and on horseback. When the procession had passed in review, the queen and her attendants entered their carriage and were driven to the carnival grounds, where the queen took her seat upon her throne, surrounded by her pages and maids of honor. And thus opened, most auspiciously, what promises to be the greatest event of its kind that ever took place in The Dalles.
