A very critical surgical operation was performed this morning on Mrs. W. F. Magill, of Dufur, by Drs. Logan and Ferguson at The Dalles Hospital. At the Dalles hospital the lady was doing as well as could be expected.

Tomorrow the Balley Gaisert will have the 7th Regiment U. S. Infantry band aboard on their homeward trip from the Dalles carnival. This will be a grand opportunity for the usual loving people to take a trip to Portland and attend the carnival. The Balley Gaisert will leave at 7 a. m. and arrive in Portland about 2:30 p. m.

Such a voice as was heard last night was worth traveling miles in a blizzard to hear. That splendid tenor of Herr Schott completely captivated the audience. Such was the comment given by the Galveston News when the great singer visited that city, and Dalles people will voice the sentiment after hearing him next Wednesday night. Those who have heard him, either when here about a year ago or in Portland, all say the same thing.

A little incident that happened yesterday afternoon at the race track proved a tremendous source of laughter at the expense of the chief of the city fathers, Mayor Farley, himself. During an interval between the races the mayor and Mr. Markham's horses were, with a clown upon his back, in front of the grand stand and between the audience and the race track. "Ladies and gentlemen, I have the pleasure of introducing to you today W. L. Bradshaw." The clown ran to the audience, and quick as a flash he jumped to his feet and shouted at the top of his voice: "Yes, ladies and gentlemen, that's me, and, as you see, I'm riding one jockey and leading another."

W. J. Jeffers, of Five Mile, was delighted yesterday to meet Joseph Norman Horns, the only first cousin he has on earth, and one he had not seen since the battle of Shiloh in April 1862, when Mr. Horns, then a mere lad, visited the battle-field to see his father, who was a Union soldier and master of the Second Infantry band. The lad followed the profession of his father, and while playing here with the Seventh Infantry band is on the retired list after thirty years continuous service. Mr. Jeffers recalls a thrilling incident in the life of Mr. Horns. When a mere child his father's regiment was ordered to California. This was before the days of railways, and the regiment, including the elder Horns and his family, set sail from New York in the ship San Francisco. The vessel was wrecked outside the New York harbor and the scattered members of the regiment were picked up by passing vessels and taken to all points of the compass, some back to New York, some to other American ports, and not a few to Liverpool and other European ports.

One of the funniest incidents of the carnival last night was set down on any program and didn't happen till nearly everybody had gone home. It was nearly midnight when John Hampshire led a procession of young ladies and gentlemen to the guests' pavilion, where they seated themselves as best they could. Each was furnished with a tin horn, and Johnny assumed the functions of "band leader" and stood facing the rear, beating the air with hands and arms for dear life, to the unearthly tooting and corseching of the horns. It was just such a pantomime as only John Hampshire could execute, and it set the spectators into convulsions of laughter. After one side-splitting "number," a lady rose to her feet and "played" a "cornet solo," the rest of the "band" joining in the "chorus." The effect on the audience was simply exasperating. Following the "cornet solo" the musicians (7) arose, marched in procession through the midway, the "band leader" leading and the "musicians" making enough discord to jar the eardrums of the alleged "Indian man-boy."

Last Night at the Carnival.

The attendance at the carnival last night was very large, almost equal to that of Wednesday night, and that of tonight promises, at this writing, to be the largest of all. The town is literally crammed with people and the fair and carnival will undoubtedly wind up in a blaze of glory.

The great feature of last night was the marriage of Mr. O. P. Bagley and Miss Ella Sartell, two well-known young people of The Dalles. The bride looked very handsome in a blue silk gown and white hat, while the groom wore the conventional black. Rev. Clarence Lake performed the marriage ceremony after the ritual of the Episcopal church. At the close the bride and groom were presented to the vast throng of spectators by Mr. A. E. Lake. Following the introduction came the presentation of a magnificent wedding cake, the gift of Andrew Keller. The presentation was made by John H. Omdelbaugh, who said:

"In behalf of the finest lot of men and the handsomest galaxy of ladies ever assembled on the coast, I extend to you the heartiest congratulations. He who marries does well. He who marries before such a crowd as is here assembled is above the average, brave. Hundreds of young men, now within the sound of my voice but intent on gazing at you would willingly do likewise but lack the courage. 'None but the brave deserve the fair' and you are entitled to the whole carnival. T. J. Schott, J. C. Hostetter, Judd Fish, Jess Crandall, each in turn promised to make to you the little talk that I am now endeavoring to make. So did Mr. Pease, but they all weakened, because they are all married. They didn't dare to say to you, as I do, that marriage was some what like this carnival, easy to get into, but Heaven alone knows how expensive to get out! You are fairly entitled to 'take the cake,' which I now, for the carnival management and the people here assembled, present you."

Wagon's Attraction at the Carnival.

The great attraction at the carnival tonight will be an Indian wedding, which will take place on the band stand at 8:30 o'clock. This will be in no sense a mock wedding, but perfectly real and for life. The bride is a beautiful young Sioux—as beauty goes among that ilk—of approximately 16 or 17 years of age, and the groom is a very good looking young buck of approximately 20 years. The ceremony will be wholly after the Indian custom, and not a single Indian man will have any part in it. The bride and groom both belong to the upper Ten Water tribe of Yekima Indians, and their chief, Tom-nah-ah-ah, will perform the marriage ceremony, and whatever explanation is needed by those who will be furnished by the Indian man-boy, who it is known among the pale faces as Johnson. After the ceremony the chief will present the bride and groom with a number of appropriate presents contributed by the carnival management, which the young couple may purchase today to assist the marriage. We don't forget to mention that the bride's name is Two-wice-we, and the groom's Sap-pe-satch-coo-teches.

The carnival committee has planned a "Surprise" that will immediately follow the Indian wedding. The exact nature of this surprise has not been revealed to the public, but Tom Omdelbaugh is assured that it will furnish lots of good natured fun, and that every body on the grounds will join in it without any special invitation.

Besides these features there will be two Indian war dances, one by the Wamoa tribe and the other by the Yabima. These dances will not take place until there is time for everybody to be on the grounds.
