THE CHRONICLE has received a copy of the Oregonian Hand Book for 1901 containing a vast amount of valuable information in small compass concerning Portland and the Pacific Northwest. It is profusely and beautifully illustrated and is just the thing to send to eastern people who are thinking of coming to the Far West. The Oregonian will mail you a copy for seven cents in stamps.

The management of the late fair and carnival were able to make a rough estimate last evening of their expenditures and receipts so as to ascertain, approximately, how they stand. The result was very gratifying. While there will be no large balance on the right side of the ledger, nor indeed was any such expected, it is pleasing to learn that the balance is on the right side, and that financially, as well as in every other respect, the fair and carnival were a great success.

In a few days the premium lists of the late fair will all have been checked over and warrants drawn for the premiums, as well as for all claims against the fair and carnival. When these have been drawn and signed the premium warrants will be mailed to their respective owners, and those for all claims against the fair and carnival, apart from the premium list will be paid out by J. C. Hostetler at French & Co.'s bank. These letters are expected to be in Mr. Hostetler's hands against tomorrow.

Portland milk consumers will soon be able to obtain their lactical fluid at five cents a quart again, if the plans of Messrs. Crandall and Bingham, two Ohio men, materialize. They are in that city looking for a location in the suburbs, upon which to keep 2400 cows, and they propose to establish branch offices in various portions of town, where milk will be sold at five cents a quart. They do not intend to deliver the milk in milk wagons. They propose to arrange for bringing milk to Portland by train from Willamette valley towns, and to this end they have been canvassing the facilities for rapid transportation. They are now making a deal for a tract of land near Mount Tabor.

Mr. Harry C. Liebs, of this city, was united in marriage yesterday evening, October 10th, to Miss Etta Pittman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Pittman, of Woodlawn, a suburb of Portland. The wedding ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents. The bridegroom is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Liebs, of this city. He is a successful and highly esteemed business man and a valued member of the city council. The bride is a young lady who made many warm friends during a residence here of some six months. After a wedding trip to Seattle and Tacoma Mr. and Mrs. Liebs expect to be "at home" to their friends in The Dalles before the end of next week.

The widow of H. J. Waldron died the other day at her home in Portland, where she had resided for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Waldron came to The Dalles in the early '80s, and resided here till Mr. Waldron's death in 1872. Mr. Waldron was prominently identified with the business interests of both city and country in those early days. He was postmaster of The Dalles for a time, and for years conducted a drug store in the stone building at the foot of Washington street, which he built and owned. He built the residence now owned and occupied by R. F. Gibbons, on Fourth street, and he was largely interested for a time in the sheep business, in partnership, we believe, with H. M. Beall, of the First National bank, and others.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon a well-shaded thermometer in a store window on the south side of Second street indicated 73 degrees, but it is fair to say that this was probably three or four degrees above the normal heat in the shade on the north side of the same street. The sun shone bright and clear in a sky without a cloud or speck from zenith to horizon. A more perfectly beautiful day no part of the earth's surface ever saw. Said a stranger, who appeared to be a man of some 40 summers, "I never saw as pretty a day as this, and I was born and raised in Oregon." "Then you never lived in The Dalles," said the newspaper man. "No," he answered sadly, "this is my first visit." And he was no hayseed, either, but a member of a well-known Portland business firm.

The Dalles Carnival.

Good weather and many visitors attended The Dalles carnival up to the hour of its closing Saturday night. The display made by the merchants and others, the fruit and vegetable and other exhibits, and other attractions, including amusements, were very creditable for a city the size of The Dalles. Hood River, we are sorry to state, was conspicuous by the absence of a Hood River exhibit of fruit. It was a splendid chance to get in an advertisement that would have been of great benefit to Hood River. Many visitors from a distance were eight-score at the carnival, and the fruit on exhibition was not the least attraction for them. Orchardists in the vicinity of The Dalles made a very creditable exhibit. G. R. Gattner, of Hood River, exhibited some fine specimens of apples from his place and got appreciable cash from general exhibitors. He received first premium on Spitzenberg and Baldwin. A.

B. Billings and J. N. Knight of Mt. Hood were the only others from Hood River valley who made exhibits. Mr. Billings was awarded prizes on Baldwin, Ben Davis, Alexander, H. K. W., and best single variety of winter apples. James N. Knight got the prize on best box of Gravenstein.

J. N. Knight's box of Gravensteins—forty-five in a box—three tiers, filled the box completely. The box was sold to a Mr. Pease, of San Francisco, for $2.—Hood River Gazette.

As Others See Us.

Brother Holder, of the Shaniko Leader, after visiting the late fair at this place, has this to say of it:

"The fair at The Dalles just closed was one of the best ever held. Every department was filled with exhibits of the very best character, showing to the visitor what the Inland Empire was capable of producing. The fruit display was one that could not be excelled anywhere. In the live-stock department was some of the finest specimens of horses, cattle and sheep that any country could show. Many of the visitors expressed surprise at the show of stock, and said they had no idea that Crook, Wasco and Sherman counties had within their borders the fine strains of blood that were on exhibition. The poultry department was excellent, and visitors were continually admiring the fine display of the various breeds, from the wee mites of the bantams to the largest breeds of chickens, one of which birds would make a meal for a dozen of people.

"During our stay at the fair we talked with many exhibitors, and all expressed themselves pleased with the awards and said the judges were impartial, giving the premiums to those whose superior merits deserved it. We were more than pleased to note that Sherman county (our old home) made such a splendid showing of stock, taking many valuable premiums. What they won in the competition were deserving, as that county has within its borders some of the finest breeds of horses and cattle in the state."
