

ROOSEVELT AND THE "WAH HOSS."

If, as a prominent Georgian is reported to have said at Washington, President Roosevelt has destroyed at one blow the entire sympathy he had created by appointments to political positions in the Southern states, and it has all been brought about by the entertainment of Booker T. Washington at dinner, then the president might as well desist from attempts to create sympathy in the South or to conduct himself in a way that will fully satisfy the prejudices that are sometimes exhibited in that section.

It is doubtful if the Southern people generally took particular notice of the fact that Mr. Roosevelt extended some civility to Mr. Washington as one of the ablest and best representatives of his race. In any event the old Southern "wah hoss," if so inclined, will probably find it difficult at this late day to work up any issue that the country will take seriously.

The president is a man of independent thought and action, and he has been in the habit of paying his respects to all sorts of people whom he thought worthy, whether they were statesmen, politicians, commercial men or cowboys. If he saw fit to have to dinner Booker T. Washington who, in intelligence, enterprise, morality, cleanliness, godliness and good deeds will probably be found the equal of many white people in the South, that is the president's own affair for which he will doubtless be ready to hold himself responsible at any and all times.

People who are able to read know what Mr. Washington has done for the uplifting of the black people in the South, and as an earnest worker in a good cause he has received praise from everyone who approves noble effort. People who read his remarkable address at the opening of the Atlanta exposition understand how he feels on the matter of social equality between the two races and will appreciate what slight reason there is for the old "wah hoss" to fear the approach of any social upheaval because Mr. Roosevelt has seen fit to break bread with an intelligent colored man.—Spokesman-Review.

SUGAR TRUST—"PHILANTHROPY."

The American sugar trust will compass heaven and earth for free sugar. Not content with the special efforts now in force to crush the domestic beet sugar industry they are flooding the newspapers with statistics to prove that it costs the people of the United States $85,000,000 a year to raise $49,000,000 of a sugar tax, which the government doesn't now need. The figuring is done this way. We consume annually about two and a quarter million tons of sugar, of which one million tons is from American sources and the rest from foreign countries and subject to an average duty of $36 a ton, or a total of about $45,000,000. "But," says a cut and dried sugar trust article received this morning from "91 Wall street," "the price of all the sugar consumed, however, being enhanced to the extent of the duty of $36 a ton, or a total of about $84,000,000, it is evident that $36,000,000 additional is paid by the people in order to provide the government with $49,000,000 of revenue.

wherever it is not subject to the full force of competition with the American product, at all the traffic will bear, the reduction of course would be a pure gratuity on the part of that eminently philanthropic institution. Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes, which being interpreted means that we object to having so much sugar in our'n. Democratic papers will publish these figures and weep over them. THE CHRONICLE will shed never a tear. It sees the sugar trust's game as well as the trust magnates and their hired statisticians see it. It knows, and so do they, that free sugar means the destruction of the domestic sugar industry, and its destruction means the absolute control of the sugar trust.

Rather than see the domestic sugar industry ruined and the country placed at the mercy of the sugar trust, THE CHRONICLE would rather pay twice the present price for the term of its natural life. This is republicanism and, as THE CHRONICLE sees it, true Americanism to boot.

John Most has been sentenced to one year in the penitentiary for advocating murder. Most is an anarchist; his theory condemns to death all rulers. He advises their extirpation. Every democrat shrinks from the thought of limiting free speech; but Justice Hinsdale, who presided over the court of special sessions where Most was sentenced, does not hesitate to say, and with truth, that "the liberty of conscience, the freedom of speech, and the freedom of the press do not need such concessions" as indifference to enemies of the state like Most to "save to the fullest extent unimpaired those sacred rights of a free people."
