Oregon Boys Play Just One Game.

Homer Angell, of The Dalles, and Dick Smith, another Oregon graduate, went to Columbia University, New York, to study law, says a recent issue of the Telegram. Although greatly interested in football work, the two Webfoot decided not to participate in the sport, but confine their energies to the pages of Blackstone. However, they wandered to the side lines each evening and watched the varsity and "scrub" eleven at practice. Some of the flippant easterners learned of the football renown of the two Oregon lads, and passed light remarks in their presence, telling them if they were such "crackjacks" they had better enter the game. This offer the boys declined with thanks, but the Columbia roosters took up the cry of "cold feet," at which our boys promised to come out just for one practice.

When they appeared on the field next afternoon the Columbians gave them the "ha-ha." They immediately sized Smith up as a big "stiff," in college parlance, and Angell, who has but one hand, was just a common "mark." The coach set the Oregonians on the "scrub" team, and both immediately distinguished themselves by magnificent defensive work. When the "scrubs" took the ball, it was passed back to Smith, who was playing half-back. Without waiting for interference, he broke through varsity line and, giving the "straight arm" to half a dozen men, rushed up almost the entire length of the field and made a touch down.

He was able to outrun the swift men behind the Columbia line and scored on the varsity, something that isn't often done in a big college. The players, coaches and roosters immediately swarmed about the Eugene man and began to feel his muscles and eye him in perfect wonderment. When asked if there were any more in Oregon like him, Smith replied: "The woods are full of 'em." Smith has positively declined to play any more football, but says he just wanted to show the easterners that Oregon wasn't so slow.

Finds It to Be Only an Illusion.

New York, Oct. 30.—The Berlin correspondent of the London Times and the New York Times says the letters of General Voyron, who commanded the French troops in China, to Field Marshal Count von Waldersee have made a disagreeable impression. The German public, according to the correspondent, which has been deluded into the belief in a growing Franco-German friendship, now has its eyes opened. The Kreuz Zeitung does not publish the letters because, as it says, "they do not furnish altogether attractive reading for wide circles."

Shamrock II Not for Sale.

QUEENSTOWN, Oct. 30.—Sir Thomas Lipton, who arrived here today on board the White Star Line steamer Celtic, from New York, said to a representative of the Associated Press that the report that the Shamrock II was for sale in New York was quite untrue, and he intended racing her in American waters next season. He reiterated his purpose to again challenge for the America's cup and expressed himself as being quite satisfied with the manner in which the Shamrock II had been sailed.

A late Washington dispatch says: "Woolgrowers in California and Oregon, and in fact all of the western states, have obtained an important diplomatic victory by succeeding in inducing the administration to abandon the reciprocity treaty with Argentine republic, which proposed a reduction in the tariff on wool coming from that country of twenty per cent per pound."
