PUBLICITY AND THE TRUSTS.

The Saturday Evening Post of Nov. 2nd has a very suggestive article on "Publicity and the Trusts," from the pen of Senator William E. Mason of Illinois. Senator Mason takes the broad ground that the regulation of the trusts can only be brain, another for muscles, and still anreached by compulsory publicity. other for bones. A correct diet will not He holds it to be a well-settled body, but it will sustain every other he holds it to be a well-settred principle of law that the state has ample power to regulate and control the corporation and the trust. The legislatures of the several states fix the rates of tariff on the transporta. the rates of tariff on the transportation of passengers and freight and in one celebrated case the supreme court of the United States held that a grain elevator, although private property, stood in the gateway of commerce and that the state legislature had a right to fix the charges. The senator makes this decision the person, corporation, combination or When every drop of blood in the veins is trust has a practical monopoly on But when the blood is impure, moroseanything which the public requires for its use, the rates charged for it may be governed and controlled by the state from which the corporation the state from which the corporation derives its existence and powers. those organs which make her a woman. The cabman has his rate fixed by law because he benefits by a public franchise and uses the streets of the municipality; the ferryman has his rate fixed because he is given a Kan. The real solution of the problem in a law that shall uniformly apply to all the states and effect all combinations, trusts and communities alike. But the only way to have a national the constitution giving congress a power which it does not now possess. Senator Mason puts little faith in what is known as the Babcock amendment, which contemplates the removal of all protective tariff duties and Tar which cured her. She has from goods manufactured and sold clarke & Falk in this country by a trust. As a consistent protectionist the senator doubts the wisdom of endangering confess to the world that we have Clarke & Faik. not genius nor brains enough to regulate our trusts without destroying them by foreign competition. But the difficulty of obtaining the necessary two-thirds vote of both houses of congress for the submission to the people of an amendment to the constitution is fully appreciated. Such an effort was made in the last congress and was met by the solid opposition of the anti-republicans. Senator Mason hopes for better things from the coming congress. He thinks the question has risen above partieanship and parties and resolued the upper level of patriotism. He hopes therefore that the coming congress, being so far removed from a presidential election, will feel itself so removed from the exigencies of Clarke & Falk's sure cure for boils.
